THE FRIEND

*About Gods love its time to disclose
In poetry instead of plain prose
The ease of his style
Makes everyone smile
He's special, I know, cause it shows.*

*In the cold he's a fire's warm spark
Like an arrow he heads for the mark
He solves all my troubles
They vanish like bubbles
Like a candle lit up in the dark*

*He's a good one to look to for aid
Offering support, unafraid
In providing support
He never falls short
His friendships I'd never trade*

*He's strong and always there for you
A big help in all that you do
If there's one thing I'm keen on It's his shoulder to lean on
And the protection he offers us too.*

*Gods wisdom is displayed each day
His mill grinding love in our way
His spirit's the missing clue
To helping peace surround you
In his time, in his hour, in his way.*

A very unlikely bunch

1994 dawned bright and cheery for me. I was on long service leave enjoying the company of my family and two weeks holiday in Queensland while the rest of the school coped extremely well without me. It took me a while to get back into the swing of things—two days into term two and my two weeks in Queensland seemed like a past life—but I managed to break the news to my year eleven Applied computing class that they would be producing the school magazine this year.

This class of students proceeded to attack the tasks involved in the mastering of desktop publishing very quickly. Year Ten students had an American exchange student berating them to produce more work for the magazine while other year groups had other equally forceful Year Eleven students encouraging them to contribute. The Applied computing students as a group have contributed very well to this year's magazine. Even the Year Eleven TEE computing students were coaxed along to the end of year pizza night, where we intended to complete the content of the magazine. The Year Eleven typing class also helped by typing several of the articles for us using the computers in the Computer Graphics room. I thank all of these students for their contributions.

Mr Nigel Stewart helped again with most of the photographs. The unfortunate disappearance of the school camera at an inopportune time meant that we missed out on many photographic possibilities. Ms Jacinta Battista helped once again with the collation of student contributions, including the cover page competition. This year it was won by Cameron Shinner of Year Eleven. (Other contributions can be found in the student contribution section.) Many other students have helped with anything from proof reading to pushing students to contribute to the magazine. I thank them all.

Finally, to those students who actually contributed, whether by writing articles or putting in poetry or short stories or by entering the cover page competition—well done everyone. This yearly magazine can only be as good as the work which is contributed by the students and teachers who supply us. May God bless you all.

Glenn Wilson.

PRINCIPAL'S REPORT

My Lord Bishop, members of the College community, I am privileged to present to you the 1994 Bunbury Catholic College Report.

In this Year of the Family, the most outstanding feature of the year was the level of activity and involvement in a particularly wide range of events.

From the outset, Bishop Quinn's Jubilee formed a significant part of our planning. We congratulate you, Bishop, on the years of dedicated leadership to our diocese and we delighted in sharing your joy with you in song and in dance.

Other events which made the year memorable for our student community, from the year's Opening Mass (always an inspiring and awesome start to the academic year) to the Thanksgiving Mass and Speech Night, included:

A developing, frequent use of our Chapel for Wednesday morning Mass, rosary during May and October, Retreat Days, and class and Homeroom prayer. We were especially pleased to see the occasional parent arrive to join us and would welcome a further growth of parent numbers.

Camps... from the small groups involved in Educational Support and Development, Leadership, Art, and Science Camps, to Outward Bound, to the always friendly Year Eight camp and to the always enriching Year Twelve Retreat.

Our Year Twelve Retreat this year was outstanding because of the quality of personal dignity and valuing which our Year Twelves brought to the occasion; I felt truly privileged to be a part of the week.

Among the staple events (no less special for their regularity) like student socials, Newman Festival (held at Aranmore this year) Catering Dinner (we thoroughly enjoyed Eastern European fare) and the Senior Ball, we must highlight the Rock Eisteddfod in which Bunbury Catholic College this year took off five of the eight awards: Best Sound, Best Lighting, Best Costumes, Best Concept, and Best Choreography.

Our College Choir followed suit at the Bunbury Music Eisteddfod by distinguishing itself with a score of 88% and a commendation for its "mature sound, first class rhythm, and powerful, effective dynamics."

In addition to all our usual activity, 1994 saw the introduction of ex-students as guest speakers in our Careers programme: among our guests we welcomed Stacey Walkely to speak on Veterinary Science, and Glenn Crouch to speak on Navy Communications and Code Development.

Social Justice issues - the world as part of our family - were highlighted this year through student involvement in the St Vincent de Paul Winter Warmth Appeal (many students knitting their first ever "squares"); special fundraising for Rwanda Relief (students raised a total of $1389.05), fundraising by year eight for St Joseph's school in Bombay, and involvement in contributing to Peace Packs for Kenya. A link with East Timor with the Don Bosco School of Fuiloro Lospalos at the eastern end of the Island saw a compact disc player and many books find their way to East Timor and letters and information find their way back to us. All this and no diminution of efforts in raising funds for the Pontifical Missions.

College curriculum development saw added growth in our music department, with the introduction of peripatetic classes in saxophone, flute, clarinet, violin and cello; the introduction of our aboriginal studies program after many months of planning; and the piloting of the new Religious Education Guidelines (these are approved by our Bishops and do refer to the new Catechism).

Our college staff have worked diligently throughout the year to ensure familiarity with the new Mandate of the Catholic Education Commission, relating this call to our own Vision Statement and to the needs of the adolescents we educate. Another major part of our community learning this year focused on the tragedy of youth suicide, particularly in the area of recognising young people at risk and responding to their needs; our counselling department organised and hosted a "Steering Clear" programme for parents eager to improve their family relationships.

The achievements of our students as a community and as individuals is testament to the excellence of teaching and learning which is the daily business of any college.

As a community we congratulate the year twelve students of 1993 on their success - 69% of this year group qualified for tertiary entry and a significant number achieved marks in the top 10% or 20% of the state in English, English Literature, Accounting, Geography, Economics, Physical Science, Human Biology, Physics, Discrete Mathematics and Applicable Mathematics.

Subject Distinctions, awarded to students who have achieved in the top .5% of the state, were awarded to Michael Abdo and to Sarah Martin (both for Geography); Sarah Martin was also awarded a Certificate of Excellence for achieving A grades in ten subjects over her two final years.

Special congratulations go to Sarah Martin, Heath Pardoe and Jared Potter, who each scored an aggregate in excess of 400 points; Sarah Martin was awarded the Kelderman Award as the student scoring the highest TEE aggregate.

Current students highlighted 1994 with a vast range of special achievements.

We began the year with our touring Cricket first XI; the boys defeated New Zealand, scored a moral victory over Victoria and found representation through Drew Walker in the All Australia Marist Cricket Team.

Our Dragon Boaters continued the winning trends, blitzed all comers in events in Fremantle, Mandurah and Bunbury, and finally took off the Junior Trophy and the State Championships.

In Swimming the Catholic College team defeated Bunbury Cathedral Grammar in all age levels and competed in the A division of the Associated and Catholic Colleges competition - THE FIRST COUNTRY TEAM IN HISTORY TO COMPETE AT THAT LEVEL. I arrived on the day in some trepidation, fearing that a rout, even at A level, would be difficult to accept. Our team, however, was fortunately oblivious to my fears and tackled the opposition with confident enthusiasm, the boys coming second in both the Senior and Junior divisions, the team finishing a sound fifth. Danny Novak highlighted the day, finishing as the under thirteen Champion.

In cross-country we competed with the ACC against thirty-five other schools and ran in fifth, with three of our students being named in the honorary ACC cross-country team; congratulations to Angela Summerfield, Ben Halligan and Chadi Ghandour.

At the ACC Athletics, competing in B division our Junior Boys finished in first place and our team finished fourth overall. Ben Piggott at this event jumped a new under 16 record of 1.95m in the High Jump and gave notice of a very special athletic gift.

Many students in a wide range of sports excelled during the year; our girls won the SW Senior High Schools' Basketball; in Netball we took off the Junior Coca Cola competition and the Bunbury Netball competition with Melanie Prout awarded the All Stars Certificate; our Junior footballers took off the inaugural Independent Schools' Shield; Volleyball recorded an excellent season; and in Water Polo BCC teams came first and third.

Academic achievements also abounded during the year. Our students participated in Science, Mathematics, and English competitions; In science we saw or students awarded eleven distinctions and twenty three credits with Craig Martin achieving in the top 1% of the state; in Mathematics seventeen distinctions were achieved, fifty-seven percent of students scoring in the top half of the state and six in the top five percent; and in English our students achieved thirteen distinctions and forty credits.

Individual highlights during the year included Piotr Baizert earning a place in the Murdoch Summer school for Science; Jenelle Carter and Rachel Pelusey winning places in the women in Engineering Science Camp at Curtin University; Cameron Shinner awarded a high commendation at the Inaugural Angelico Art Exhibition in Perth (exceptional for a Year Eleven student), and Melissa Cawdell continuing to demonstrate her writing prowess in achieving a high commendation in the Canon Young Writers of the Year Competition.

With so much talent and abundant skill with which to develop this potential, it is not surprising that this year the college board determined to add Sporting scholarships to the academic scholarships established last year.

Our community owes much to the hard work and dedicated time freely given to us by the members of the college board.

Currently, much time is given to developing a College concept plan to extend over the next ten years including planning for a Lecture theatre and all purpose communication centre, a gymnasium, swimming pool, extended manual arts room as well as upgrading and maintaining facilities and grounds.

Much has already been achieved, and in 1994 we witnessed the establishment of a one-way direction of the internal road, brick paving of the canteen area, landscaping between the hall and the chapel area, new gardens established to beautify the grounds and, of course, general maintenance continued.

On behalf of the college community I would like to thank each member of the Board, and in particular Mr Bryan Sykes for his work as chairperson.

Thanks are also due to the wonderful parents who consistently contribute to the work of the P&F; from the parents who help feed the hungry in the canteen, to the P&F committee for its tireless work through the chair held in 1994 by Mrs Maria Trovato.

The year began with a welcoming breakfast preceded by Mass in the college chapel; activities during the year incorporated a cakeless cake stall; a progressive dinner; a fundraising movie (In The Name Of The Father); and Art Extraordinaire. Many thanks to the special sub-committee which continues to give its energy to this last, vital fundraiser through Frank Townsend as Chairperson, and with the continued energies of Helen Nicholas and her team of assistants.

This year the college opened its Uniform Shop, selling the new sports uniforms. The venture proving a success through the efforts and energies of Lesley Gasmier, the decision was made to continue with a full uniform shop for 1995 and into the future, so that all uniform items except shoes will retail solely through the college. Many thanks are due to Mrs Gasmier for spearheading this most difficult task and guiding us through these early stages.

In giving recognition to the parents who have contributed so much to college life, I cannot fail to also thank their children, the students who have wholeheartedly participated in college life. In particular, I wish to pay tribute to the class representatives for their willing involvement in organisation and management. The student council in 1994 was well led through the efforts of Head Boy Joshua Giumelli and Head Girl Fleur Zani. Thanks, too, must be rendered to that other team of student leadership, the House Captains and Vice Captains who ensure that college life has available a range of activities to further individual and team achievements.

None of the above would be possible without the dedicated efforts of a team of wonderful staff. From the Administrative team - Mrs De Gooijer as Office Manager and her staff and my Deputies Miss Pat McDonagh and Mr Les Fabre, each teacher, and each staff member, I have been privileged to be ably supported in the critical task of walking with God's children in this part of their life journey.

Finally, this report comes to its conclusion as we farewell those leaving the College at the end of this year. We bid farewell to Fr David, whose other commitments prevent him from continuing as our Chaplain for Years Ten, Eleven and Twelve; to Fr Pat on transfer to Margaret River; to Joseph Twynham who left for warmer climes of Queensland earlier in the year; to Gregg Moxham who will devote his teaching skills to students at Newman College, to Colin Nielson who will similarly enhance student learning at Guildford Grammar; to Janine Guidera who has chosen to extend her experience closer to home, to Joseph Munforti who masqueraded as Ed Taylor and thereby gave him the opportunity for a relaxing long service leave; and Mrs Debbie Salathiel who similarly gave Mrs Jan Palmer her leave opportunity. We thank each of you for your contribution to the BCC community and we wish you God Speed and good fortune.

For each member of the community I thank God, and pray that the coming year brings us closer to His vision for each of us.

As I look back on 1994 I'm aware of the various ways in which we strive to live out our faith amidst the 'buisiness' of daily living.

We marked the beginning of our school year with Mass in St Patrick's Cathedral. Our student leaders were inaugurated and our Year 12's challenged us to grow beyond our 'old shells'. Nowhere was this growth more evident than in the response of students to the needs of those less fortunate than ourselves. Mission money totals skyrocketed during Term One to equal what had been given in the previous four terms !

Concern for justice and personal generosity were evident on many fronts, whether it was people in Rwanda or here in Bunbury. For example, Year 8's and 12L have raised several hundred dollars for

St Joseph's School in Bombay where the students have no sanitation facilities or drinking water ! During his visits in Term 3, Bishop McKeon personally encouraged the students in their efforts to "act justly, love tenderly and walk humbly with [their] God." Micah 6:8

Throughout the year we have been enriched by many guest speakers. Bishop Peter Quinn was the first and he welcomed our new Year 8's as he participated in their R.E. programme by sharing his story, "his life as Bishop of Bunbury Diocese". During the Bunbury Parish Mission, Norma Woodcock spoke to Year 11's and 12's and to staff, sharing her journey of faith and her great love for God. The Disciples Youth Mission Team were among others who shared their faith in a very personal way during Year 10 and Year 11 Retreat Days. Representatives from many welfare organizations in Bunbury spoke to Year 9's on their Retreat Day and in Term 4, Sr Romanus spoke to Year 11's and Year 12's on the topic of vocation.

During Terms 1, 2 and 3, each Homeroom had time set aside "to walk with God" on a Wednesday morning at 8.05 a.m. Thanks to the patient dedication of our Chaplains, Fr David Mackay and Fr Pat Rooney, we have celebrated the Eucharist many times and held a Communion or Prayer Service occasionally. Since many students live out of town, they were excluded from these times of worship so in 1995 we will experiment with alternative times that include all students. In Term 4, Wednesday Worship consisted of time set aside for personal prayer and reflection and was led by various teachers, beginning at 8.15 and concluding at 8.30 a.m.

Term 3 saw the twenty one staff responsible for Religious Education begin the pilot of new R.E. units. This has required inservice and evaluation with students involved in the latter. Already our recommendations have been implemented in the current unit. As well, our school-based pilot of a Year 8 - 12 Human Sexuality Programme has continued, thanks to the assistance of staff from the Billings Family Life Centre who gave freely of their time for such seminars as Love In The 90's held during Term 2 for Year 10's. Until our students realize their God-given gift of sexuality, they can neither realize their potential as fully human persons nor challenge those values of our society which tend to dehumanize, rather than enhance, human life.

At the end of Term 2, we regretfully farewelled our Chaplain to years 10, 11 and 12, Fr David, whose added teaching and study commitments prevented him continuing as Chaplain. Now at the end of Term 4, we are no less sorry to farewell Fr Pat, Chaplain to Years 8 & 9 students. Both priests have been an enormous support to staff and students alike. We wish them well in the future as we offer them our heartfelt thanks for their gifts of time and energy, wisdom and faith.

In all things we are mindful that Jesus is the Light in our darkness, as was the theme of our Thanksgiving Mass in November. We continue to pray that we, the Bunbury Catholic College Community, will always turn to Christ who is our guide and our light.

Now that I am into my second year as R.E.C., I have as many questions about the 'how' of religious education as about the 'who' i.e. those who we teach. In all the challenges I have been very ably assisted by a team of devoted and energetic R.E. teachers of which I extend my gratitude for their creativity, support and patience.

Carmel Forrest

Year 8 and 9 Chaplain

I have been happy to do what I could as chaplain for year 8's and year 9's over the past years. This year we benefited from having the use of the Chapel and a major change was the effort to have a Eucharist for every home room. Each of the many celebrations I took part in was different. On rare occasions a few made it obvious they were present under sufferance but mostly I was very pleased by the attentiveness and the way the groups took part. Some well chosen readings and meaningful prayers ... and reflections and short homilies that were very much to the point. Recent ones I remember — by a year 9 boy a short reflection based on a reading from Corinthians on being the body of Christ ... when one member suffers all suffer with ... we prayed for Rachael Italiano and her family and by another year 9 boy ... an appreciation of what his friend does for him ... listens, encourages, good to talk with, etc. Mostly the songs weren't my sort of music but often had good messages.

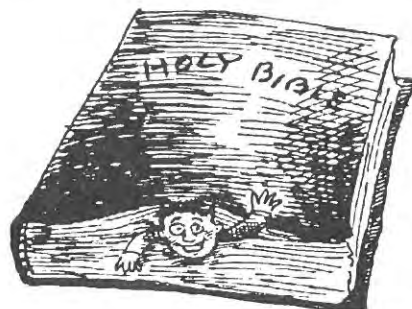

Thanks to Carmel Forrest and to homeroom and R.E. teachers for the energy put in to make these happen. I am aware that teachers work under pressure at times. I hope what we did together helps promote the Catholic ethos of the college.

Fr. Pat Rooney

Social Justice at BCC

Religion Classes in Year 12 this year were instrumental in acquiring a sister school which was not as fortunate as they in their education. They saw this as part of their CHALLENGE FOR JUSTICE. When they were visited by a group called FRIENDS OF EAST TIMOR who spoke of the oppression that the people in East Timor were suffering under a military rule many students were moved by their plight. It was then suggested that perhaps there could be set up a liaison with a school in East Timor. The proximity to Australia was a deciding factor and also the East Timorese helped the Australians in combat against the Japanese during WW2. They saved many of our soldiers' lives and sacrificed many more of their countrymen's in the struggle.

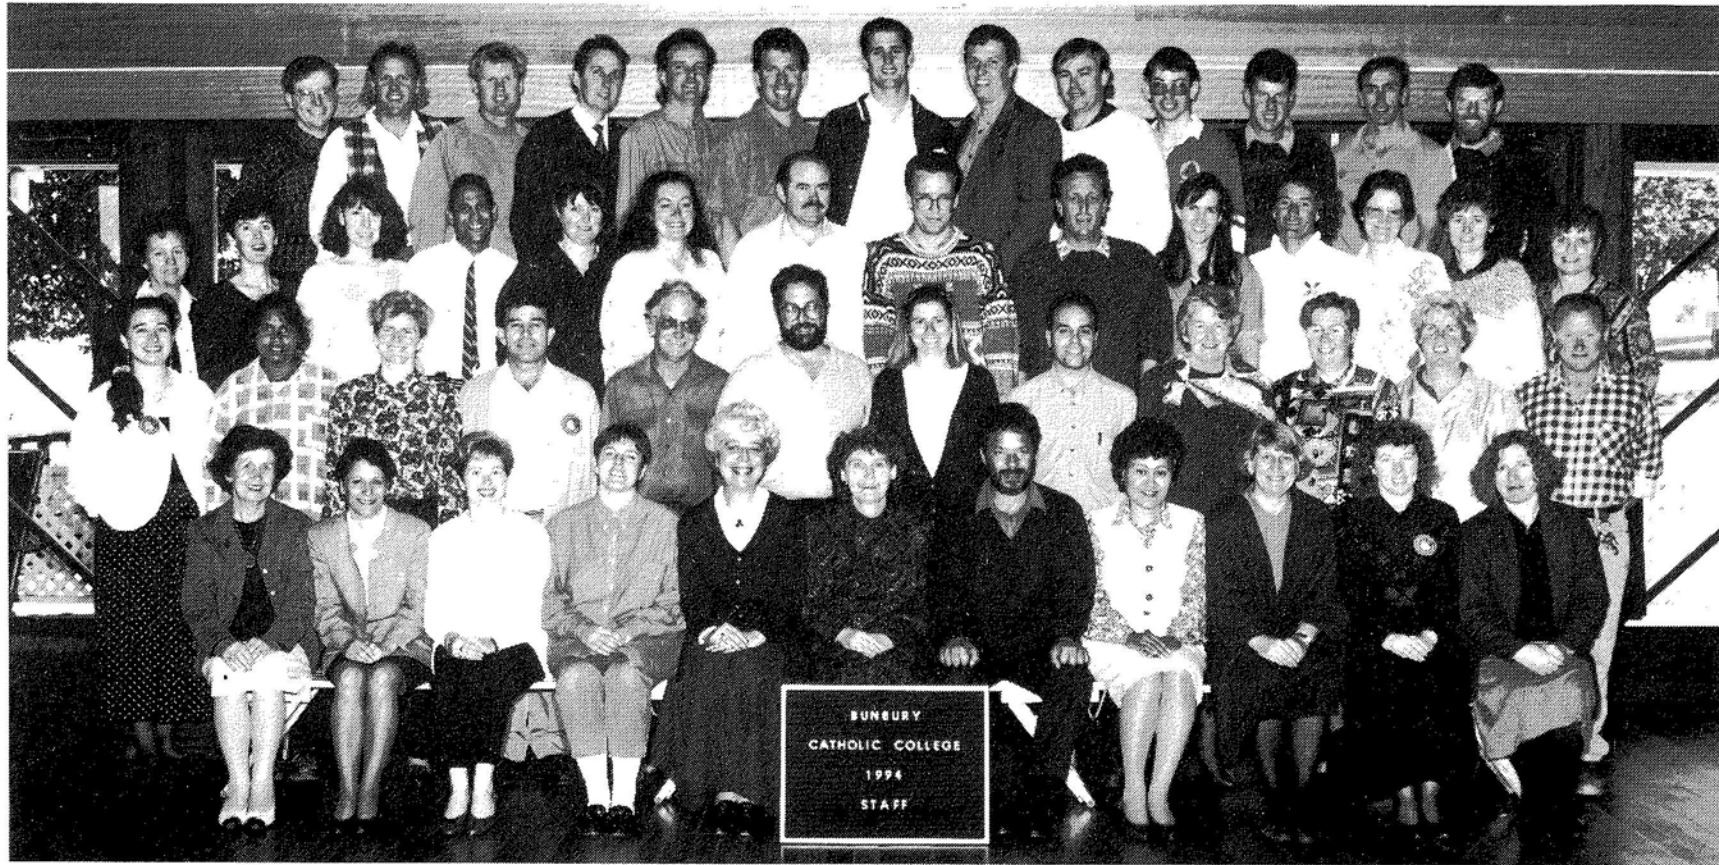

We are so fortunate here in Australia and so it is wonderful that our students have taken up the CHALLENGE. WELL DONE COLLEGE!

Blessing of the Stations of the Cross Bunbunbury Catholic College Chapel.

Father David, Carmel Forrest, Danny Harris.

Head Boy and Girl

As we look back on 1994, we can't help wondering whether we will miss year 12. Despite the stresses and pressures of the TEE, there have been many enjoyable moments we have shared together as a year group, such as our senior ball and the retreat. Friendships formed in past school years have been strengthened, as well as new ones made, and it is with a touch of sadness, but also enthusiasm, that we look towards the future.

We would like to take this opportunity to recognise the many people who have made our final year at Bunbury Catholic College so memorable.

The year 12 SRC members Aaron Gibson, Jillian Purcell, Beth Legg, Natalie Szkraba, Carlo Scasserra, Michael Courtney, Cindy Campbell and Melissa Cawdell, ably "co ordained" by Mrs Hogan, have put a lot of time and effort into various events. They have worked hard to make the ball enjoyable, and to organise our leaving jumpers, as well as many other things.

The house captains Sara Green, Wesley McGrath, Elizabeth Rossi and Adrian Spinelli have been kept busy not only through the organisation of the Swimming, Athletics and Cross-Country carnivals, but also supporting the Rwanda Appeal through the Basketball Challenge in term three. The house captains have also been assisted by the vice captains, who for the first time were elected from year 11.

Special thanks must go to Mrs Hamlett and Mr Eglington for their work in co ordinating the House Captains. Finally we must thank Mrs McGowan, Miss McDonagh and Mr Fabre for all their work and support.

Fleur Zani and Josh Giumelli.

1994 House Captains

We began the year with a personal development course. We shared our goals as leaders of the school and came to know our colleagues for the year.

BCC House Carnivals were enjoyed by all, the efforts of participants appreciated. The Year 11 Vice-House Captains have been of much support to the Year 12 House Captains. We thank you very much and wish you the best in the future. Four of BCC's greatest motivators were in charge of each house:

Valentine - Ms. Battista
Xavier - Mr Moxham
Mac Auley - Mr MacArthur
Marcellin - Mr Rubie

The guidance of these people has enhanced our leadership skills, to benefit the school community and our future roles as leaders.

1994 has been most rewarding for all House Captains. The enthusiasm of BCC's youth has been an inspiration. During the year, we have seen many potential leaders. Thanks must finally go to all staff and students for making this such a memorable year.

This year has seen some changes in the house system at Bunbury Catholic College but the underlying principle of providing a means for friendly competition on and off the sporting field still remains intact.

The first obvious change was the election of year 11 students as vice captains. This had the advantages of widening the opportunities for students to develop leadership skills and enabling the house competition to continue to function in fourth term when the year twelve students are otherwise engaged. I feel it has been a successful innovation and the students involved have risen to the challenges of a leadership role with enthusiasm.

We have also organised house activities in TAFT and lunchtimes in an effort to encourage interaction between year groups. While the first attempt could best be described as a learning experience, subsequent efforts have proved popular with students and staff. It is hoped to continue these next year, perhaps even having "house days".

The house point system, which rewards effort and achievement both inside and outside the classroom, is used well by some but others still need encouragement. The positive results of presenting a certificate to a student whose normal contact with staff is usually a negative experience can form a basis for long term benefits to all parties.

My thanks and appreciation to the captains for 1994 and best wishes to those who will be in the team for 1995.

DEPARTMENTAL REPORTS

Music

The Music Department is developing with great enthusiasm this year and it is rewarding and exciting to be part of the department. There have been many performances presented by the Music Department in 1994 which included the Bishops Jubilee, the combined primary school concert, the Bunbury Eisteddford (our choir received the top mark - 88%) and various school assemblies and lunch time concerts.

This year also saw the start of the keyboard laboratory with the Year Eights being the first to experience this music technology. We hope to increase the interest in keyboard in other groups.

In 1994 we also started instrumental studies which involves lessons in Violin, Cello, Saxophone, Flute, Clarinet and Trumpet. The group lessons are going well and if you would like to learn one of these instruments next year the opportunity is there for you.

Finally, I would like to thank all those students who put their time and effort into rehearsals and performances this year and I look forward to their support and enthusiasm next year.

MR. MARTINO.

YR. 8 Aboriginal Studies

One of the exciting additions to the year 8 program this year was the introduction of Aboriginal studies into the curriculum.

All students have spent a term learning about the past and present of the Nyungar people in the South West. Guest speakers and a planned trip to an Aboriginal site have been added features of the program.

Aboriginal studies have been seen as an important area in our students education. Currently in Australia there are many misunderstandings between Aboriginal and non Aboriginal people. It is hoped that from this course the Yr. 8 students will have the opportunity to appreciate the Aboriginal culture.

Italian

Every year the "Dante Alighieri Society of Western Australia (Inc)" invites all schools in Western Australia to take part in the Dante Alighieri Examination.

The Dante Alighieri Society is responsible for promoting the Italian language and culture world wide.

Once again this year, students of Bunbury Catholic College took part in the examination with three year ten students and one year twelve participating. The standard achieved by these students was very high and all should be commended for their efforts.

Congratulations to Rita Van Dongen and Lisa Patane who both received distinctions.

Learning another language can be very stimulating and rewarding.

Brave ragazze! (well done girls).

Ciao

Year 8 MacKillop Visit

On Tuesday the 30th of August 1994, the year 8's of the new MacKillop Catholic College of Busselton came to Bunbury Catholic College. We shared lunch together and in the afternoon played sports. The school competed in soccer, netball and football. Bunbury Catholic College won its share of the games. The visit was a great success due to Catholic College meeting lots of people.

Maths Competition

On the 2nd of August 128 students of Bunbury Catholic College took part in the Westpac Australian Mathematics Competition.

As usual the questions tested their skills in algebra, arithmetic and geometry and presented them with some quite complex problems to solve. All students are to be congratulated on their efforts, regardless of their scores, as selection as a school representative means they have demonstrated a high level of achievement in Mathematics.

Of the 128 students, 56 received certificates of credit (top 50% of their age group in the state) and the following students were awarded certificates of distinction meaning that they were in the top 15% in the state.

Computer Related Studies

Something which is becoming clear, is the increased dependence by society on the use of computers and other related technology. Recently, the federal government promised millions of dollars to the development of a multi-media, CD-ROM industry in this country. Just the other day Telecom announced that they had signed a deal with a large American software company to develop software that would enable people to get easier and cheaper access to the Internet and the information highway.

One or two of the local banks have increased the number of automatic tellers outside their doors because more people are requiring them. The larger supermarkets in Bunbury have gone to using computer based systems at their check-outs. Even the local delicatessen owner has bought a new computerised cash register. However, what are we doing at Bunbury Catholic College?

Our students are living in a world where computers and related technology are common place. They have not experienced a world where banks were open on Saturday morning and until five o'clock on week days, because they were the only times people could get their money. My Father's collection of 78 rpm. records looks insignificant against my own pile of long playing records. I still do not own a CD player, yet many of my students can tell me of the benefits of one brand over another. We at the college recognise the need to reflect this new society in our educational methods.

Computer graphics has been introduced as a subject within the school and is very successful. Units of science have been taught using computers to supplement the teaching methods. Typing is now introducing computer technology. This very magazine has been produced using the latest of computer software and hardware available in the school, by students studying computing and typing. The thanksgiving mass booklet was a similar exercise. These are only a few examples.

Computer related studies as a subject is still going. Through this medium we can develop those people who can possibly become the computer experts of the future. However we do not all need to be computer experts. We only need to be computer users, able to recognise what skills are required to be able to achieve a certain goal or a certain outcome using whatever tool is at our disposal.

Glenn Wilson Computing Teacher.

Design and Technology

1994 has seen substantial improvements within our college, including (in a special way) changes in the Design and Technology department (previously known as Industrial Arts).

Computer Graphics replaced the previous subject of Technical Drawing, and many students in lower school have had an experience with the C.A.D. programme. Next year, the upper school students will be able to take up studies in this area.

The new woodwork room has now completed a full year of operation, and all classes have been fully occupied with tasks involving both designing and manufacturing skills.

Applied Industrial Arts, Year 11, has been a particularly industrious class this year. Students undertook a range of school-based projects, which added improvement to facilities within the college. Some of the projects helped with facilities in the new woodwork room, while others helped upgrade facilities in the maths department and the college hall.

Science

At the end of 1993 the school board gave the science department a generous grant to increase the technology available for use in the classroom.

Five computers and five interfaces were purchased along with probes to measure temperature, heart rate, acidity, sound, light and a variety of other variables.

Mr Stewart has been busy programming the computers throughout the early part of the year and our students will be increasingly exposed to more modern type laboratories in the future. Mr Stewart is to be commended for his work in this area.

Our lower school students entered the University of NSW Science competition this year and once again did extremely well. Eighty three students entered. Year 10 Craig Martin received a High Distinction placing him in the top 1% of students in the country. Kate Matthews from year 9 and Michael Martella and Jonathon Parker from year 8 were our other high achievers. Overall we received 1 high distinction, 11 distinctions and 23 credits.

Sam Cusato, Nathan Ball, David Fenn, Adam Everett.
Winners of the tomato growing competition.

Cameron Lindberg won the year 8 mousetrap car competition and Sam Cusato, Nathan Ball, David Fenn and Adam Everett won the year 8 tomato growing competition.

Mrs Morris and the science club are in a recession at the moment but will be constructing milk carton boats for the Aqua Spectacular at the end of the year.

Mr Tom Hall and the school board are to be thanked for organising the construction of a shade house. This is already being utilised by classes and the ground staff.

Finally I would personally like to thank Mr Paul Greaves for filling in for me most admirably whilst I was on Long Service Leave last year.

Operation Winter Warmth

Six colourful blankets in all were our final product in response to "Operation Winter Warmth" which was launched in the school library at lunch time, for the first time this winter.

Many enthusiastic knitters, both staff and students generously gave their time and energy to see others less fortunate than themselves kept warm on cold days and nights. Many parents joined in too, making squares and donations of wool.

St. Vincent De Paul Society and Anglicare who had made press appeals for the needy were the beneficiaries of our school scheme.

Blankets for the winter warmth appeal.

To say that larger things grow from small beginnings is evidenced in the fact that a generous member of the public—not a member of our immediate community—after seeing our campaign reported in the local newspaper responded to our leadership and made a large donation of wool. This has been stockpiled to continue to put our Christian beliefs into practice by doing something for the deprived in our community. Knitting will start again in 1995 just before the cold weather begins.

Year 11 Catering Class

Mrs Martella got a bit of a fright at the beginning of the year with a few too many people eager to be in the class and burn a few things down. It was a case of "too many cooks would spoil the broth," but this was not to be.

The catering class got off to a good start with our dinner held in the Year 10 block for parents, friends and staff. We got through the night successfully and everyone seemed to have a good time.

After our next mission of cooking dozen upon dozen pumpkin scones, the thought of seeing another one of those little orange things was too much to bear. However, it gave us a good insight of what the catering business involves, through using time management, planning and, of course, our cooking skills.

Our next big task was to cook up a feast that the Bishop would never forget. This involved cooking enough food for around 120 people. Then it was out of the green and into the black and whites to serve it up at the Bishop's Jubilee held in the hall. This was a very special occasion and the food and each other's company was enjoyed by all.

All these activities, plus more, have made the catering class of 1994 very enjoyable to be in and the class would like to say a big thank you to Mrs Martella for all her help and effort during the year.

Also a special thank you to Miss McDonagh, Mrs Cairns, Mr Moxham and Mrs Gianfrancesco for their help at the catering dinner and during the year.

1994 Speech Night

GUEST SPEAKER

First of all I'd like to thank Bunbury Catholic College for inviting me to speak. Painters and Dockers have been touring Australia, including Busselton and Bunbury, for nearly as long as the people in East Timor have been enduring the pain of the Indonesian military oppression, so I was a little surprised that the College had a bunch of hard-working Social Justice activists who had recently twinned with a school in East Timor. I was even more surprised to discover that at least five students regularly demonstrate in political rallies for East Timor, and that the curriculum of the Business Studies class incorporates letter writing exercises to the Secretary General of the United Nations requesting self determination for the East Timorese people.

I wondered whether education in Catholic schools had changed, or if at De La Salle College all those years ago, I just wasn't lucky enough to encounter teachers who retained their sense of enquiry. I now know that BCC is a little unique. Very few Westerners, in particular institutions are prepared to actively listen and learn from countries like East Timor who keep telling us that all the well meant aid sent to them is of little use unless it reinforces a political platform which will ultimately reduce the country's dependency on charity. This is why BCC's stance is important—not only are you responding to East Timor's direct request for help to finance education (you even sent a teacher up to meet relevant East Timorese people) but you are promoting the political reality and path which they have chosen. Self determination for the East Timorese means that eventually they will take charge in determining their own affairs. In fact at the launch of the CD "All in the Family" Jose Ramos Horta went a step further: he welcomed the help of Australian musicians for the present but undertook a personal guarantee that young East Timorese rock singers would concert in solidarity should Indonesia invade Australia and people like me and Peter Garrett are sent to re-education camps.

Tonight I've been asked by the Principal to answer one question: "Why does a Westerner with a privileged background and education, who has a good job and a fairly high profile want to help a bunch of people who are not close friends, who don't speak English, and who don't live in Australia? Surely it ranks of tokenism" she suggested.

Unfortunately this is a question that comes up time and again. It's normally asked by people who for one reason or another have lost their sense of enquiry and rendered less capable their imagination and powers of creativity. We could pose a similar question to one of the great creative thinkers: let's ask Jesus Christ why he cured those ten lepers mentioned in the Bible and not the twenty blind people in the valley next door? Or why he chose a bunch of Catholics instead of all the Muslims? Hopefully he would come up with a better answer than I, but since I've been invited to speak tonight I'll give it a go.

I went to East Timor tracking my brother's last media assignment, and was appalled at the way the Indonesian military treat the East Timorese people. I was even more appalled when they put me and Colin Buckler, the drummer from 'Painters and Dockers' in gaol. I'm still really devastated when my mother cries about losing her eldest son; I can still remember her ringing Foreign Affairs every day for months—like the Wilson family were doing this year; I get sick to death of my Timorese friends in Melbourne begging me to write yet another article about yet another atrocity in East Timor. My whole life, my family's life, my friends' lives, my five year old daughter—all our lives have been altered and influenced by Tony's death in East Timor. The world is now so interconnected that whether we like it or not we are deeply affected not only by events in neighbouring countries, but by political decisions made thousands of miles away. Life is no longer a whole lot of unrelated isolated incidences. It seems that if you ask enough questions and learn enough about one story, you not only want to do something, as a citizen of the world you are obliged to. It's in your own interest. It could well be that one day, as Ramos Horta says, we may need his mates in East Timor to pull off that gig.

So my basic motto is:

- 1) keep asking questions;
- 2) keep on pumping out the best vibes you can; and
- 3) get involved.

We all created this world—all its glory and all its messes. We've all got to jump in—with a good clean sense of fun and integrity—help each fix the mistakes and find ways to do it better. Essentially I think we should ask ourselves not "why should I" but rather "Why shouldn't I?"

It's great fun working with the Timorese in Melbourne. You learn a lot. About generosity. About love. About good food. Their music is different—for instance when Midnight oil recorded a version of an old Timorese melody called Kolele Mai [which we put on the CD] one reviewer said it was the most interesting thing the band had done for years. Even some of the Australians I've met and had to work with for East Timor have been great. For examples before we launched the CD in Melbourne I had to get Bishop Hilton Deakin on side so that he'd jump from a helicopter and make a big splash for the media. I've never really sat down at a table drinking red wine with a bishop, but I figured it might loosen him up a bit—make him think more like us rock 'n rollers. And it did. I made myself very good friends with a Catholic bishop and he now wants to launch all the Dockers CDs providing its from a helicopter. And it's been great here today with the Bunbury Catholic College rock band working out a few licks for this new number 'Thank Evans' a ballad from the first opera ever written about East Timor.

I don't believe all the statistics which our government departments put out—that the young aren't interested in world issues, that all they want to do is become yuppies. Too many are suiciding which means they are not happy with the way the world is. I'm glad students here at BCC have found a productive way to help change by linking up with the East Timorese people. I hope you keep on asking them down here to talk—besides the life and experiences they have to talk about, they're Australians now and we've got to look after them till they find their feet in this new country.

I believe changing our society is possible. For proof we only have to think about black Australians—thirty years ago the only political voice they had came from a battered old tent on the grounds of Parliament House and all we wanted was two three of them on our football teams. Now the most popular rock band in Australia is Yothu Yindi, Ernie Dingo gets all the best film roles, Tracie Moffat's the best film director in Australia, some of the best education is happening in black schools, and my girlfriend who's an artist just got a contract painting her tee shirt designs for K Mart. Keep at it!

PAUL STEWART

Rock Eisteddfod '94

Behind the stage it was pitch black. There was a gentle hissing sound as the smoke machine filled the stage with mist, other than that it was silent. Everyone lay in their positions anticipating the start of the music.

The first few notes of the soundtrack emanated from the speakers, the curtain was raised and the lights were on us.

From start to finish the performance was over in less than eight minutes, but it was a performance that everyone felt proud of. We had spent over 7 months working on the production of the Bunbury Catholic College 1994 Rock Eisteddfod.

The Rock Eisteddfod committee, made up of year 11 and 12 students, were the ones who decided to base the theme of our performance upon the story of "The Prodigal Son". This was a relevant theme, as it related to the fact that 1994 is the "International Year Of The Family".

Once the theme for the performance had been decided, it took many more hours of discussion for the scenes to be planned and the music to be decided upon. When all this was done it was time to start choreographing the dance. Students Olivia Princi and Krystie Gledhill worked together with dance teacher Angie Richardson to co-ordinate the dancers, choreograph the moves and finally teach the dance to all the students involved.

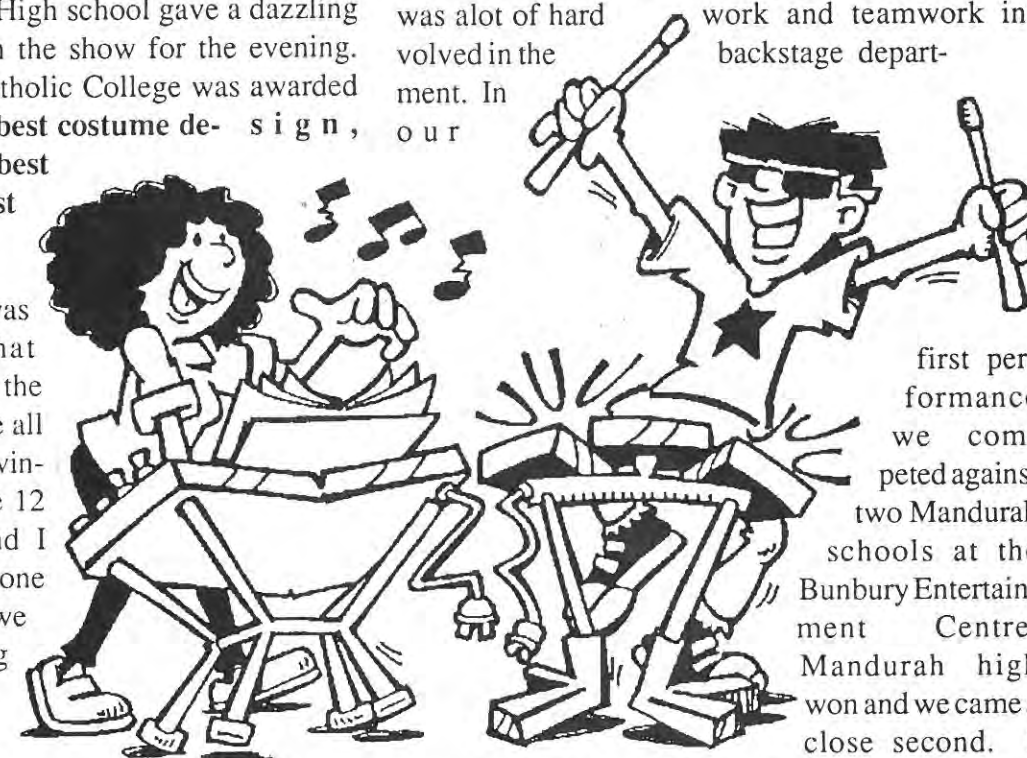

It took many long hours of rehearsal on weekends and after school, before everyone had learnt their part and the dance was perfected. It wasn't just the dancers who have so freely of their time, in order to produce the Rock Eisteddfod. Mr Martino and Angie were at all the rehearsals, helping to organize everyone. Mr Moxham and the backstage crew were there working out props and scene changes. The lighting Technicians were there programming the lights. Parents came along to help create costumes for each of the 60 dancers and various other teachers got involved to help in the organisation of all the activity.

The Rock Eisteddfod was the result of everyone working together to produce something we could all be proud of. On the night of the competition when we danced at the Bunbury Entertainment Centre, in front of a crowd of over 800 people, I doubt there was one person who was involved in the production of the Rock Eisteddfod who did not feel proud of their achievement.

We competed against two other South West schools that night. Mandurah High school gave a dazzling performance that won the show for the evening. However Bunbury Catholic College was awarded best lighting design, best costume design, best choreography, best soundtrack and most original concept.

Although everyone was disappointed that Mandurah High won the overall event, we were all extremely happy with winning 5 awards out the 12 speciality awards, and I don't think that anyone could disagree that we succeeded in achieving what we set out to do, and that was to produce an amazing performance.

Emma Potter 11C

From the beginning of year eight the students of Bunbury Catholic College were given the chance to go in the 1994 Rock Eisteddfod. I chose to go in and participate in the backstage crew. The Bunbury Catholic Colleges performance was based upon a modern day version of the prodigal son. There was a lot of hard work and teamwork involved in the backstage department. In our first performance we competed against two Mandurah schools at the Bunbury Entertainment Centre. Mandurah high won and we came a close second. I would like to thank Mr Moxham, Mr Martino and Angie Richardson for all their help and encouragement throughout the eisteddfod.

Bishop's Jubilee Concert

The Bishop's Jubilee was celebrated with a successful performance from the primary schools and Bunbury Catholic College on September the 1st.

The Rock Eisteddfod students performed with full support from the Lighting, Sound, and Backstage crew. The Lighting was electric and the dance and drama was sensational.

The College small Choir also performed singing beautifully with excellent harmonies and good vocal strength. Early in the year the large choir had received top score at the Bunbury Eisteddfod.

The Bishop said that the concert was outstanding and he was also very thankful that the students could celebrate his Jubilee with him.

MR MARTINO

In third term, 12 students, ranging from years 8 to 12, performed at the Bishop's Jubilee Concert. The concert was held in celebration of Bishop Peter Quinn's 25th year as a Bishop.

The group of students, who were organised by Mr Martino, sang a variety of songs ranging from songs from the 1960's through to songs from the present day.

The group was accompanied by piano, flute and guitar.

Also performing at the concert, was the schools 1994 Rock Eisteddfod.

Theatre Arts

Over the past year, the year twelve theater arts class has been involved in numerous performances.

Our first performance at the Newman festival was a learning experience for all involved. The play The Drunkards Dilemma or Her Honour for Tenpence was an exiting melodrama that involved a courages hero, a devious villan, a poor damsel in distress and a drunken aunt, who worked together to present twenty minutes of humor, rivalry and a touch of romance.

A few students from the Theatre Arts class devised a short Easter production which was performed at the easter assembly. It managed to reveal the essence of the true meaning of easter through powerful drama.

The Catholic Performing Arts Festival held in Perth saw a wealth of talent from three Theatre Arts students. They presented Shakespeare's confusion which was somewhat mixed up and zany with some of Shakespeare's classics.

Throughout the year our classes have been filled with laughs, spontaneous improvisations, comical skits, creativity, wit, and eye opening educational experiences. The products of these activities have unique movement pieces to evoking music, clever modernised versions of Shakespearian scenes, deep and meaningful interpretations of greek mythology and entertaining and educational monologues and one man shows. Overall Theatre Arts in year twelve has been a year of accomplishments and enjoyment for both students and Ms Daly.

BETH LEGG.

Year 11 Biology Camp

On Friday the 21st of October, 11 Biology students set off to Kerriley Park, led by Mr. Stewart to their doom. We were in for a hectic three days.

When we arrived we were straight into it. We set off to Sandridge in the stinking heat to examine "the community". A couple of quadrants and hours later we returned to our cabins, only to pick up all our traps; pitfall traps, light traps and Elliot traps. We were then left to set all these up in hope of catching anything from small rodents to insects.

By this stage we were pretty hungry and headed back for our BBQ tea, then the analysis of our results of the Sandridge Community (e.g. Soil tests) and then staying up till after midnight writing out our prac. and drawing transects. Then a couple of hours later, to sleep, in our comfy beds which sagged and squeaked.

Then after a couple of hours sleep we were up for another fun filled day of biology. Today we were up for the challenge of trying not to tip out of our canoes while we investigated the dam and then the swamp. Rachel, Natasha, Vanessa and Rita weren't too successful! We also checked our traps and a rabbit, frog, a few ants, spiders and insects later, headed back to camp.

That night worked till 10pm analysing and doing experiments on the data we'd collected. Then once again we were up till after midnight trying to keep our eyes open while we wrote our reports (by that stage we weren't in the best of moods with Mr. Stewart!)

The next morning we were up by 6 am for our prayer service, then off to Laterite Ridge to examine "the community." Once we were finished there, we headed back to once again carry out experiments and analyse our data. By this stage it was a battle to stay awake, or even move, but we managed to make it onto the bus and safely home (it was a pretty quiet bus trip!)

Finally we arrived home, only to look forward to spending the afternoon and night finishing off our write ups!

But over all it was a good weekend. A special thanks to Mrs. Vanderweile for looking after us all and cooking us such good food and especially to Mr. Stewart, for a camp we won't be forgetting in a hurry!

I wouldn't want to get in their way!!

Outward Bound

120 yr 11's were faced with a bit of a problem. What would you do if you were kicked off a bus in the middle of nowhere, miles from civilization with a sleeping bag, a compass, a piece of plastic, a couple of bits of rope, a bag of clothes and twenty other confused companions and watched in despair as the bus drove off into the distance?

You don't know? Well neither did we but that's when our adventure began...

After saying our goodbyes, our instructors were revealed to us and we all headed off with many experiences awaiting us. We didn't know what to expect or what lay ahead and we each had our own fears, preconceptions and expectations. such as if we would conquer the ropes course, abseiling, rock climbing and flying fox and also if we would survive the endless walking, rafting and especially each other.

Once we overcame our individual fears and preconceptions and faced the challenges before us, we realised that we could achieve what for some seemed "the impossible". We discovered that some thing that seemed hard and out of our league was in reality easily achieved with a bit of confidence and some support and encouragement from the others.

Once more into the breach I go. (Ben Dean)

Having a good time? (Anna Giumelli)

Tarzan (Romar Chatt)

Apart from being faced with all these challenges we also encountered a few obstacles such as ticks, bullants, blister bush, brocken can openers, swim tests in ice cold water, glowing aliens coming to visit you in the night, grizzly bears, giant kangaroos, wind, rain, storms, gail force winds, thunder, lighting, thunder, torrential rains, snow storms, cliffs, king waves, whirl winds, typhoons...

OK so we are exaggerating just a little bit (but only the end ones)

But seriously we didn't let anything stand in our way. We gave everything our all and as a result conquered every challenge and all of our fears.

Outward bound was a learning experience for us all, apart from learning that it is a good idea to dig a deep dunny the first time, to shut your eyes when you eat and to stay on your ground sheet under your bivio and not sticking out in the rain and dirt. We also learnt co-operation, companionship, friendship, leadership, confidence, trust patience and forgiveness.

Also we've always taken the simple things in life for granted, like a roof over our head that doesnt leak or blow away, a flushing toilet with a seat, running water without a yellow color or floaties and a fridge full of food excluding rivitas, weetbix, sardines and

baked baked beans and all the luxuries what we always thought were essential but found we could really do without

We learnt how intense it is living with the same smelly, grotty people for 10 days, 24 hours a day. We went through our ups and downs but learnt to live together and survived and the course without killing each other (just!!!). We learnt some pretty valuable lessons pretty quick about consideration working together and friendship.

OK now for some helpful hints for all you lucky year 11 of next year, destined to be outward bound-ers

1) tuna, jam, vegemite, sultanas, baked beans, peanut butter, cream corn, beetroot, spaghetti and sardines all mixed together on a rivita doesn't really taste all that bad!!

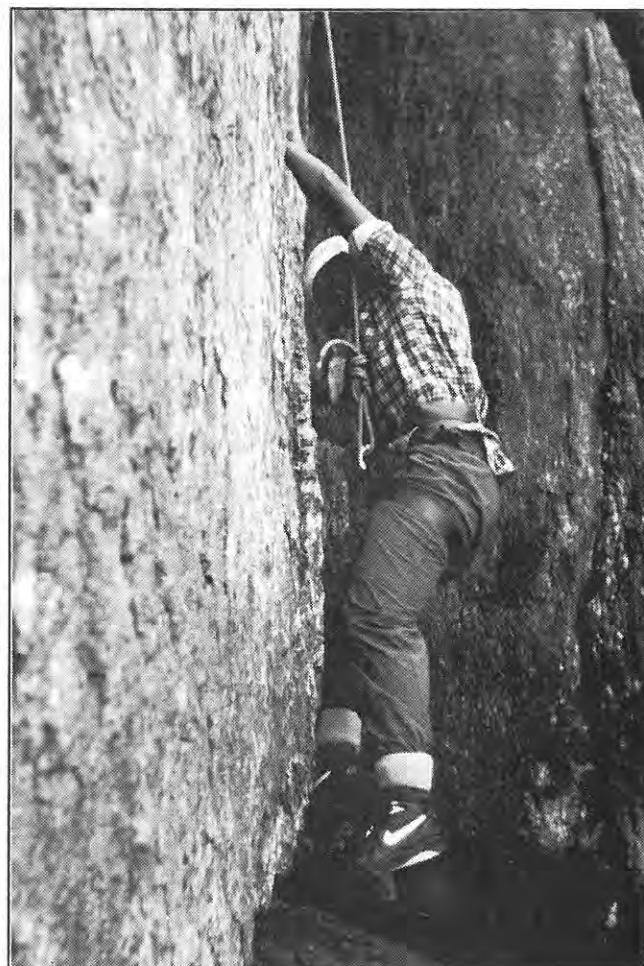

2) Shut your eyes whilst your eating

3) Make sure you screw your water bottle lids on tight before you pack them

4) It is quicker to get out and push your raft than paddle it

5) Watch out for falling trees

6) Be prepared for bad jokes

11D learning that all this food should last a week.

Finally we would like to thank Miss Murray, Mr Stewart, Miss Love, Mr Egg, Mr Moxam, Mrs Cairns, Mr Fewster and all the others involved in the preparation of outward bound.

But most of all to all the yr 11's for all the effort they put in to make the course so successful and such an experience and good luck to next year's yr 11's we hope you get as much out of it as we did.

The Incomparable, Invincible 11R on Outward Bound!!!

No mountain too high, No rock face too vertical, No bush too thick to bash.

We have CONQUERED ALL!

Against the odds, we have survived all that nature can throw at us. But through all that we have endured; the physical pain, the lack of television, the fear, the constipation, the fear of constipation, . . . one thing stands out in the realms of sacrifice. One thing that refused to budge from the forefront of every outward boulder's mind...

We carried it, cooked it, baked it, divided it, chased it, swore it, dreamt about it and consumed it—but still we starved. The campground was abuzz with cries of "Pudding" and "Custard" as a chorus of grumbling stomachs drove members of the group to mount a bunny-bashing expedition. Sadly their efforts failed to yield even a bush cricket and the nightly ritual of scraping the bottom of the Dixie continued.

Our famine was relieved briefly by the sensational gourmet results of the bush cooking extravaganza, (no pizza parlour in the world could beat it), and the lovingly tendered, fiercely guarded McGrath/Maszkowski chocolate cake. However after several thousand kilometres of trekking and two days of wading through rivers, (dope, were we supposed to be IN the rafts), we were rattling skeletons once again.

Having reached our final campsite bony, blistered, and exhausted, we waited in the rain for our final food drop, (one starving, desperate camper resorting to a diet of insects in the meantime). With the droning of an approaching food van in the distance, a wild and mindless frenzy broke out. Swarms of previously dormant vultures stampeded across the paddock as green and blue food drops zig-zagged their way through the cowpats. Once the initial hysteria had subsided, Glenn got down to the business of cooking up the most 'humungous' meal that ever was devoured, and devoured it was. Tired but satisfied, we waddled off to our bivvies to prepare for the next day's journey back to the land of fast food and chocolate bars.

Year 12 Ball

In July, the Year 12 Ball was held at the Lighthouse Beach Resort. Official guests, students, staff and parents enjoyed an "Evening in Camelot" with candel lit tables, greenery and decorations to match the medieval theme.

Highlights of the night were the presentation of students to Bishop Quinn and Mrs McGowan, and the announcement of Knight and Damsel of the ball, Padraig Kelly and Kelli Clifford.

Year 11 Art Camp

On the glorious weekend of the 4th and 5th of November, the Year 11 Art class engaged in an artists' camp at Yallingup. This involved an intensive, hard-working weekend of drawing, painting and hiking, interspersed with swimming, caving, (the commercial variety), eating, sunbaking, socializing, and tent-wrestling.

The evenings were spent entertaining Mr Purcell and Miss Love with a game of Hide and Seek, and being entertained in turn by Mr Rubie's fireside stories and the neighbourhood's attempts at conversation (ay). Cyclonic winds and collapsed shelters added variety to early morning attempts at sleep, (but we can't quite understand why the boys' tent survived untouched while the girls' tent was flattened - funny that). Howling easterlies aside, the sensational weather was hard to take. Nevertheless we breed them tough here at B.C.C., and these determined art students soldiered on to create an impressive collection of masterpieces which captured the spirit of Yallingup.

When all and sundry, (and most of Yallingup), were thoroughly covered in paint, it was time to pack the sardine can and head home. Adding to the coat of paint we also carried sand, salt, suntan, scorched feet, turpentine deodorant, and raving compliments from the Caravan Park staff. All in all it was a pretty filthy weekend, (and we have the oil paint stains to prove it).

Year 12 Art Camp

On the 9th of April this year Mr Stewart, Miss Love and a number of incredibly adventurous Year 12 Art students ventured forth to Hamelin Bay to draw, to sketch, and to wreak havoc among locals and tourists alike.

From their base camp at the Caravan Park, they set off in every direction in pursuit of aesthetic inspiration... some looked for it on the beach, some hunted for it among rocks, while others searched for it in their dictionaries. However all returned successfully from their expeditions having captured an abundance of fleeting moments while studying the changing effects of light en plein air. (For those of you who don't study art, that translates to lying about in the sun alot). Such exhausting tasks completed, it was time to quietly relax over dinner in the peaceful surroundings of the campground. That is, until the peace-shattering arrival of the rest of the art class! Having just given the performance of their lives at the Newman Festival in Perth, their spirits were high and their voices even higher. Once the peace and silence of Hamelin Bay had been permanently obliterated, there was nothing for it but to settle in to entertaining the neighbours with some delightful fireside singing, (albeit at operatic volume).

Morning finally arrived after a sleepless night of hysterical giggling fits and the Hamelin school of artists set off once again to record their surroundings with masterfully executed blobs and dabs. Producing impressive sketches in the tranquility of Boranup Forest, running rampant through an English maze and soaking up the 'arty' Margaret River atmosphere made for a relaxing trip home to Bunbury where all involved artistically collapsed in a heap. All in all though, a lot of great work was done and a lot of laughs were had.

Work Experience

Great excitement and out to work. This is the last year that the year ten students will go out as a year group on work experience.

Work studies in year 11 and 12 will now take up the challenge and offer this activity either as one day a week or as a one week block. Students will have to contract work with each teacher for the time they are absent from school.

We are moving with the advancement of technology and offering computerised job selection with the use of JIIG CAL. (Job Ideas and Information Generator. Computer Assisted Learning). All year ten students will use this program next year. Although it is sad to see work experience formally passed from year ten, we can look forward to new and exciting units.

STUDENT CONTRIBUTIONS

A Message To The Year Eight Students

Be patient, toward all that is unsolved in your heart, and try to love the questions themselves.

Do not seek the answers, that cannot be given to you, because you would not be able to live them, and the point is to live everything.

Live the question now.

Perhaps you will gradually without noticing it, live along some distant day into the answer.

Rainer Maria Rilke

AGAINST NOT FOR

They were born into poverty
And sold to us as slaves
No more freedom
No more rights
With only their life to give
The prejudiced people, they bid them off
They don't consider life
Black vs white, with white in lead
Will only lead to strife
Me?
I stand back and watch
Asking questions I tend to ignore
In fear of someone knowing
A white
Is against not for
For them, life is a living hell
Born with a purpose to serve
Blacks do their share
We often need a shave
But it's us, not them who wallow
Within our self less love
What did they do?
Why are we against them?
I try to make sense of this battle
A one way racist battle
Put us in their position
How would we feel
Wouldn't need rights because we've no life to lead
Singled out because of our race
Black vs white
With white in lead
Can only lead to strife.

A Change Of Heart

Fate had spilled into my life
Like a rock burnt out of a shell
Trying to peel and expose my thoughts
This change of heart was in hell

I had no time for fantasies
My life had just been posed
Sunk into desire and despair, I fought
To keep my dream life closed

Was honesty really a true crime?
Now speech was just a state of mind
Freedom just a memory
I'd left the world behind

I repelled against the devil
But he encouraged me on
There was no turning back
I felt for sure that evil had won

But then I heard you
I saw the light
I turned from the devil to face you
I'd shut you out and you returned
Is that what your love's all about?

ONE

I am sick of the racism
I am sick of the war
The fighting that goes on between us
That splits our nation in two.

We are all Australian:
Black, white, Italian,
Greek, Spanish and more.

Civil war among the races
Won't help the hidden faces
To come out and be brave,
To be who they are.

Why take land
And keep it to ourselves?
Why can't we share
What we see around us?
Why can't we share
Our hopes and dreams?

My heart is aching
To live as one
One, not two, three or more.

I am white, not black,
But it's my heart that controls me
Not my skin
Because I am Australian,
And proud to be.

Our cultures are different,
Our past history too
But be brave and stand out
And say what you feel -
That we can live as one
In this, our nation.

AN ODE TO A MATE - IN MEMORY OF AARON PRINCI (1977-1993)

Aaron Princi came into our school community in 1991. He was put in Mr Browning's homeroom and he settled in well, making friends easily. However, these friends didn't immediately know how special a young person Aaron was. Only his family, a few close friends from his home town (Brunswick) and the staff knew.

Aaron had a rare heart disorder which prevented him from being fully physically and academically involved in our school community. However, he passed through Year 8 with little stress. He even had a piece of literature published in the school magazine that year.

In Year 9 he was assigned to Miss Moore and his subjects were cut down so that he had some time to catch up on any unfinished work (he was very pleased with that!). In all, 1992 was a pretty uneventful year for Aaron, until November.

On November 21st, Aaron suffered a major heart attack. However, with the help of his loving parents and a few dedicated medical staff, he came back. He was worn down, but was definitely not out. His heart attack meant that he missed out on his Year 9 final exams, a fact that he kept reminding his visitors about.

Aaron went through some major adjustments that summer, but he was ready for Year 10 in 1993. Mrs Martella was given the job of trying to control him. A few meetings with "The Lord" Fabre reduced his time at school to three days a cycle, and he was thrilled with that concept.

Unfortunately, Aaron's time was coming to an end. On the 16th of March, Aaron Princi passed away, fifteen days before his sixteenth birthday.

This tragic event saddened the lives of Aaron's family and friends and it touched the hearts of students and staff. Many students formed a guard of honour at his funeral and a school choir sang at the church service.

I am just one student in our school who knew Aaron and his family well. I dedicate this article to my memories of a true friend who is missed very much.

YEAR TEN ALLEGORICAL SHORT STORIES

THE GREEDY EAGLE.

There was once a great eagle named Caesar who ruled over all the animals in his forest. From his nest in the top-most branches of a giant elm tree, Caesar could see the wide river that bordered his domain to the north, the cliffs that bordered it to the south and the canopy made by the other trees ten feet below him. Every morning, Caesar would wake before sunrise, feed his chicks and then pay homage to the sun, the only thing he believed was greater than himself.

One morning while out hunting, Caesar saw a fox who had also been hunting (as is the way of most wild animals). The fox had just taken a large hare as his quarry. Now, Caesar had grown old in the past few years. His eyesight was not as good as it had been when he was young, and he was half as strong as he had been in his prime. It was becoming increasingly difficult for Caesar to catch a hare half as big as the one the fox had caught. Ah ha, thought the eagle greedily to himself. I can swoop down and take that hare from the fox quite easily. My chicks will have their supper for the next two days. And with that, Caesar circled once and dropped in a tremendously fast dive towards the fox.

The fox, on seeing Caesar hurtling towards him, dropped the hare and darted off out of the clearing and into the forest (although Caesar was not as strong as he used to be, the sight of a twenty kilogram eagle swooping down at one hundred kilometres per hour is an horrific one). Caesar took hold of the hare in his talons and rose back into the air.

Faulks, as the fox was called, felt very indignant after the initial shock of being swooped wore off. The other animals had told him stories of old Caesar stealing their foals or their calves or their prey, but until now Faulks had never thought that Caesar would do this to him. Faulks was a rather large fox, and was recognised as a wise and intelligent part of the forest community by the other animals. Something must be done about this outrageous insult, he thought to himself and he raced off to gather the other animals.

There were many emotional stories told by many of the animals at the meeting. One cow told of how Caesar had taken her calf, who was not ten minutes old. A horse told much the same story and a feral cat of how Caesar had tried to take him as prey.

Faulks convinced them all that the only way to stop Caesar was to push his precious elm tree over, killing his chicks and thus ending Caesar's need to hunt.

The animals all rallied around the base of the giant elm. The oxen, horses and cows began to push the tree, while the moles and other burrowing animals dug away at its roots. "Push harder!" Faulks yelled encouragingly from the back of the crowd. "Harder, harder!" The fox began to dance an excited jig as he calculated where the giant elm would fall. He pointed it out to some of the horses. "Right there," he gestured towards a clump of bushes. "That's where it should land."

Faulks stared intently at the clump of bushes. He came to realise that they looked vaguely familiar, as did the den that was barely visible beneath them. "Stop! Stop!" he yelled to the animals, but the giant elm had already begun to fall.

AN INDIVIDUAL'S EXPERIENCE

One night, in one of the faraway corners of the universe, a star exploded. Fragments of this star were flung far and wide looking for a place to rest. One such fragment was a meteorite named Individual. Individual was flung into the orbit of a passing star and it was here that he first experienced the company of other meteorites.

Individual travelled around the star's orbit until, some light years later, he caught up to a string of other meteorites. Going cautiously up to the last of the string of meteorites, he said, "hello. My name's Individual. What's yours?"

"My name is Follower," answered the meteorite.

"Why are you called Follower," enquired Individual.

"Because I follow all the others so they won't laugh at me."

"Oh," said Individual.

Individual carried on past Follower and came up to the next meteorite, whose name was Coward. "Why are you called Coward?" he asked.

"Because I want to break away and be different but I can't because I don't have the courage to face the pressure of not being the same."

"How is there pressure to follow the others?" asked Individual.

"If I do something different to what they do, they ridicule me," Coward replied.

"That's not very nice," said Individual and, thinking about all this, he travelled past Coward and up to the second meteorite in line.

"Hello, what's your name?" Individual asked.

"My name's Obeyer because I obey and copy everything meteorite number one does."

"Why do you copy him?"

"Because I want to be like him and have other meteorites following me."

That's not much of an ambition, thought Individual. I think I'll go and see this number one meteorite. So, he said goodbye to Obeyer and carried on to the first meteorite in line.

"Hi. You must be meteorite number one," said Individual upon catching up.

"That's right. My name's Leader," he replied.

"Why do you lead these other meteorites around and around this planet?" asked Individual.

"Because then I have power over them."

"How do you make them obey you?" asked Individual.

"I laughed at them and ridicule them if they don't obey. Then they are ashamed and do what I want them to."

"So you pressure them into obeying you?"

"That's right," replied Leader. "You must join us too."

Individual reflected on all the questions he had asked and all the answers he'd received. Then he floated out of the planet's orbit and into free space. He could hear Leader laughing at him as he drifted off but he ignored the laughter as he thought to himself, I have the courage to be different, I am an Individual.

How It Feels To Start Year Eight At The Beginning Of Term One

The last two weeks have been particularly hard for me because I am new.

I only started at the beginning of the term.

I've learnt my way around the school and have only got lost once.

Well I didn't get lost, I knew where everything was I just didn't know where I was supposed to be. I have found some friends and I am settling in well.

THE FIRST EXAMS

The first exams for me were pretty scary. First of all I had never actually done exams like this before so I didn't really know how they worked or what happened. One of the worst parts for me was the study. Trying to think back to all the work we had done at the beginning of first term. Then worrying about whether you were studying the right things. What helped me a lot was that the teachers gave us study sheets which gave us a bit of an idea on what to study. I studied for about two weeks before the exams which gave me plenty of time to prepare. The best part was when I had to stay up late studying and then waking up feeling dog tired in the morning, when finally the 24th June came around I got up feeling quite nervous. The first exam we had was Science. I got through that alright and managed to finish it in the time space. Then there was the Social Studies exam. That was the longest one and now thinking about it one of the hardest ones. Unfortunately I didn't manage to finish this one on time and actually left out some pretty important and high scoring questions which I didn't know about, and now regret but I got a pretty good mark for it.

The next day we had our English, Religion and Maths exams which weren't too bad. I managed to finish all of these on time which was good. I'd say the hardest out of all those ones were over and afterwards treated myself to a dream donut. Now that I have done my first exams I'm not as nervous about doing the next lot because now I know how everything works which will make them that little bit easier.

By H.G.

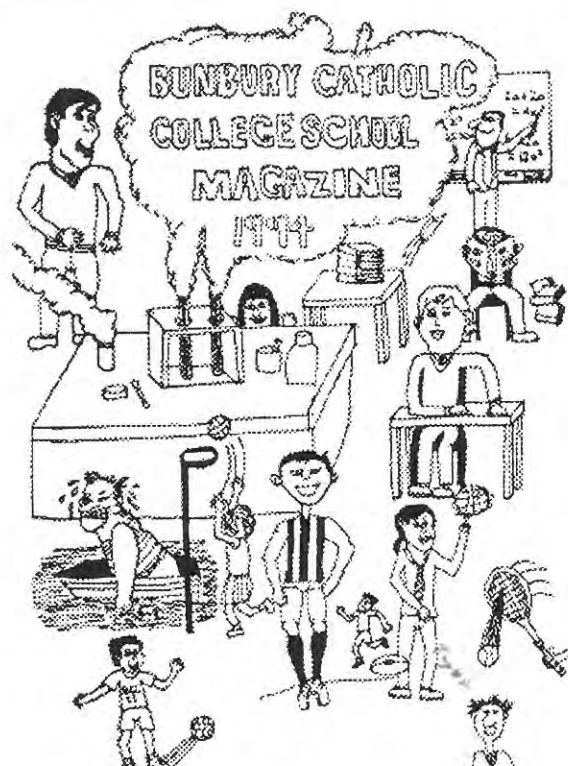

FIRST EXAMS

The night before your first Science exam, looking at your textbooks and thinking, either - "I'm going to do this, I'm going to do this" or "anyway, what is a bunsen burner?". Well I was the first one, half way through a 3 hour study session and it's already 9.00. I say to myself, "I'll quickly finish studying and get a good nights sleep". So much for that idea. I end up not being able to sleep until 10.30 anyway.

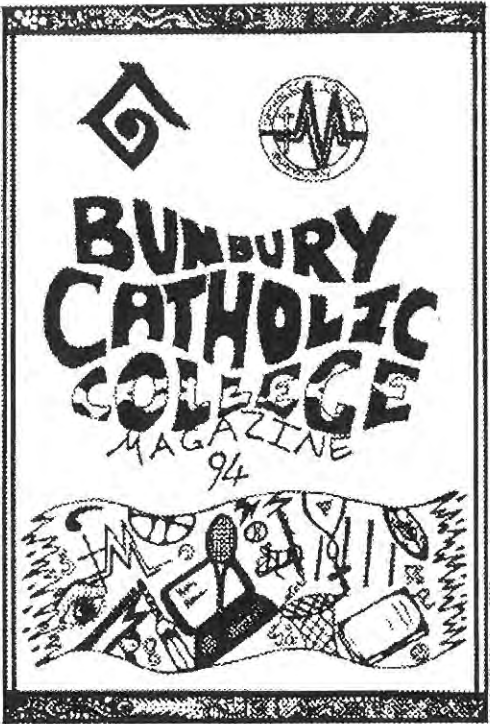

6.00, my alarm blares into my ears a monotone beep, beep, beep, beep, and I wish I'd turned it down or off. I raise my hand, slam it down on my alarm clock and was lucky enough to hit the green 'SNOOZE' button. Silence, again, at last. Immediately I again fall asleep and nine minutes later my alarm goes off again. This time I get up, turn on my light, go back to bed and start reading a good book until 6.45 when I start getting ready.

An hour and a half later at 8.15, I arrive at school where half of 8B are so nervous it's not funny. 8.35, 8.50, we're walking, slowly, to room 14 and a chorus of "Good Luck" is all that can be heard.

YEAR 11

Year Eleven at play.

FRONT ROW: Kirsty Lyall, Kate Ricks, Renae Ieraci, Lara Raper, Fiona Doolan, Emma Potter.
SECOND ROW: Yasmin Uchwal, Chadi Ghandour, Justin Harrison, Krystie Gledhill, Kristian Wright, Lyall Dilkes, Rachel Wilson.
THIRD ROW: Jarrod Lane, Tim Simpson, Allen Zapelli.
ABSENTEES: Matthew Hall, Angela Hogan.
TEACHER: Anna Cairns.

Once upon a time
In a cold science lab
Were a homeroom full of students
Who were absolutely fab.

Supergran was in control
And every morning would call the role
Just to see who was there
Then we would start the day with a prayer.

Matthew, Tim and Lyall
Keep pretty much to themselves
But when it's time for fun
Put the books back on the shelves.

Kirsty, Renae and Lara (Grover)
Are the ones who run a muck
Seldom getting into trouble
Why do they have all the luck?

Allen And Kristian
I think are the reason why
With them no one knows what to do
On them Mrs. Cairns has her eye.

Fiona, Angela and Yasmin
Are three really good friends
Keeping up with the gossip
And all the latest trends.

Justo O Justo
Need I say more
To nip nip nip
We all applaud.

Emma and Kate
Like to soak up the sun
While Krystie and Rachel
Find other things fun.

Chadi and Jarrod
Sit up the back cracking jokes
Making everyone laugh
They're pretty good blokes.

As you can see
11C is cool
Probably the best
Homeroom in the whole school !!!!

FRONT ROW: Rebecca Trovato, Helen Duce, Eryn Cowcher, Christine Streeter, Stacey Pomery, Dianna Palazzese, Lara Lewis, Vanessa Black, Belinda Hynes.
 SECOND ROW: Sebastian Pelle, Brendan Bow, Brent O'Byrne, Sean McKernan, Rita Mahoney, Joel Carter, Wesley McGrath, Oliver McBride, Mark Duchesne.

 TEACHER: Mr Micheal Rubie

It took us a while to write this poem but in the end we got it goin'!
 It's rude and crude, and very shrewd,
 but we like it and we hope you do to.

11R is room 10 in the school and when JOE reads the bulletin, we drown in his drool.

MAGPIE and TROY-BOY are the studs of our class, and RITA likes clenching broken glass.

MARKS cards aren't rude, well not a lot except for three of diamonds, we like her alot.

Cool CALVIN and BOWIE, sitting at the back, don't do stuff all, they're both to slack.

HELEN and SEAN both like to dance seductive and hot, they both had their chance.

LARA never nags, just roars when she pleases so don't ask for favours or she'll saw you to peices.

SEBA loves sardines, how much you wouldn't believe,

he once tried to steal some, hid them up his sleeve.

CHRISTINE and ERYN are great friends, thats true, their seductive massages are real raunchy too.

BRENT'S off to Disneyland to meet Donald Duck.
 while JOEL wants to go and give Donald a.....pluck.

OLIVER makes sure that we're always on time,
 but being as hot as he is should be a crime.

DIANA and STACEY have gossip to tell,
 and they also complain about VANESSA'S bad smell.

REBECCA and BELINDA are quiet at times but when Belinda yells bunnies, it blows Becca's mind.

Now for MICHAEL R!#@#$T RUBIE, what can we write
 he might think he's cool, but he's not very bright.

ROB and STAN play music that rocks, but never boast about their big

.....WOKS!

 ABSENTEES: Brett Anderson.
 TEACHER: Mr Ellis Scartaccini

Mr. Scartaccini lives an endless nightmare
 All our screaming and yelling he cannot bear
 As brave as Schwarzenegger he comes back everyday
 To witness his homeroom apes mischievous at play.

We have been crowned the unhappy homeroom
 Mrs. May our RE teacher thinks we're destined for doom
 We have Mr. Moxham every day three
 We play badminton and basketball for PE.

Hoi up front is everybody's friend
 His smile reaches from end to end
 Liana is renowned as the quite one
 She puts her head down to get her work done.

Outward Bound had its ups and downs
 Surel y it should have sorted out us clowns
 As a matter of fact it did the complete reverse
 If anything at all it made us slightly worse.

Michael Spinelli Mr. Sore Knee Man
 Was unable to join the rest of the clan
 Sciesinski the fireball told many a crude joke
 About the Irish, the English and New Zealander folk.

The miniature John Platten was little Nat
 Next time you should think about wearin' a hat
 Reevesie found himself up the creek without a paddle
 Suppose he'd rather have been in Boyanup on horse and saddle.

Sakharov fought off a snake to save his male possession
 Stealing everyone's water was his favourite obsession
 Big Ando didn't mind the occasional rumble
 Or diving on bivvies to make them tumble.

TEACHER: Mr Eric Douglas.

Eleven is our number,
'D' is our letter.
The other homerooms think they're great,
But we know we are much better.

We're stronger, smarter, meaner,
Not to mention proud.
We had the chance to prove it,
On good ol' Outward Bound.

We power walked through rugged bush,
And sliced the savage seas.
We slept among the bullants,
And ate our TVP.

On we marched through bitter snow,
And thunderstorms and droughts.
And though they tried with all their might,
They could not wear us out.

We jumped off 50 metre trees,
And risked our lives on rocks.
We balanced mighty tightropes,
And smelt each others socks.

When at night danger lurked,
And the sun it had gone down,
We huddled in our bivvies,
And made some Giusmelly sounds.

When the final day came 'round,
Into our cleanest clothes we got.
The blue and white striped dancing pants,
Mr. Egg had not forgot.

We never realised just how much,
We loved that coachline bus,
So farewell good ol' Outward Bound,
And hip hooray for us.

TEACHER: Mrs Morris.

A distant science lab was headquarters for a group of juvenile bandits who held captive a tWENDY, but traumatised homeroom teacher.

Day and night they tormented her, forcing her to sign homework diaries and hand out rivetting newsletters, while they fought over who would read the daily prayer. Eventually the day came when she had had enough and slipped out to escape in her mini MORRIS.

KELLI was the first to notice and let out a strange HOWELL to alert her fellow hostage bearers.

"How unGODLEY of her" exclaimed NITA.

"We must pursue her, she's fleeing towards the STOCKDALE forest" commanded CIARA.

MARY-ANNE was hot to trot for some time but ended up being unSYKESful in catching the escapee.

BRENDAN spotted her in the distance, hiding inconspicuously in a BARNyARD, munching on corn on the (JA)COB.

ADAM questioned the credibility of his observaiton as there were only DUPLEXes in the vicinity.

"Dear me", said JASON, "I think we should all reLEX a bit and hiBIRDnate for the rest of the day".

ANDREW'S opinion differed - he planned to sabotage his unsuspecting prey on the LEEward side.

SIMON was too busy singing "It's a LONG way to the BOTTOM if you're a sausage roll" to notice the commotion around him.

SCOTT knew he was CUMMING down with a disease when he thought he saw MELANIE sPROUTing a beard, but alas - he was mistaken - it was only GEMMA disguising herself as a NORRISH caterpillar.

ALLYSON noticed a big ol' KINGAroo after realizing that Outward Bound wasn't quite like s'taying at the HYATT Regency Hotel.

"HOWARD you like a shower?" asked MEL.

Co-ordinators Report

At the start of 1994 our present Year Eleven students were apprehensive about the challenges facing them in Upper School. Some were keen to take on the increased work load and set themselves academic goals. Others assured themselves that they returned to Year 11 because of parental pressure. Throughout the year, several of these students have left to take up apprenticeships and trainee positions in industry, I wish them all the best.

Close to the start of the year, all students took part in a Study Seminar where they received advice as to methods of getting the best out of both lessons and private study time. Further help in constructing study timetables has been given to them by their homeroom teachers, Mick Rubie, Eric Douglas, Wendy Morris and Ellis Scartaccini who have assisted the students and myself throughout the year. Brenda Hamlett, Craig Doyle, Joe Monforte and Carmel Forrest were our officiated staff.

The retreat this year encouraged student involvement. The theme was "Have pride in myself, then I can have Pride in my Country." There was lots of time for reflection and also time for relaxation together, especially during a 'Sit down Lunch' which was very much enjoyed. Another highlight of Term three was Outward Bound at Walpole. Everyone survived including Mick Fewster, Jeanie Love, Nigel Stewart, Janine Murray, Cameron Eglington and Greg Moxham who deserves our thanks for accompanying the students.

For the first time, House Vice Captains were chosen from Year eleven to assist the captains in Year twelve. This proved very successful and all of them must be congratulated on their efforts.

Class representatives organised Red Nose Day in August and raised money for the SIDS foundation. There was also rivalry among Home Rooms in raising money for Missions. Some enterprising ventures were tried throughout the term and on the day of the fete.

Throughout the year the S.R.C worked tirelessly with Mrs. Hogan and Mrs. Hamlett as did the magazine committee with Mr. Wilson and Miss Battista. Thank you.

Finally I would like to wish all students who are returning to year 12 in 1995, every blessing. Remember, efforts are successes. To those students who are leaving, I hope they will remember their days at Bunbury Catholic College and be proud to have been part of it.

Anna Cairns.

Big Mel got the reputation for being an Ice Queen
However, she's got the best reversal 360 jam you've ever seen

Then there was Jenny the vego from hell
Our carnivorous food to her we could not sell.

Andrew Harnett has many a nickname
Like Hornett, Bones, and Nuts - none of these are the same

His Outward Bound undie run never got done
Miss Murray and Marty put a stop to his fun.

Steve, that's me, was spewin' in the bush
It was probably from the food everyone called mush
Sucked in to all those who had to carry my pack
I hope it weighed a thousand kilo's on your back.

Travis is lankly and as tall as Big Ben
If you're nice to him he might make you a pen
He smelt nice on Outward Bound and was invaded by ticks
He used to kick and scream and call em' little @$*%#.

David the Mad Dog - he never cared
To stand up in front of us and say "I'm not scared!"
He got a massage from Leonie the Lizard
Now we think she's a hot oils wizard.

Josh had a stint with the TVP (the worst food of all)
There was a slimey one in his food pronounced "NUCLEAR BALL"

As cool as a cucumber he spat it out
It travelled fifty meters, without a doubt.

Leon was forever wearing his Arsenal shirt
English soccer is for sissies so he may as well wear a skirt

Cameron his mate wouldn't even stop creating art
He designed the birthday card for our friendly instructor Mart.

Jay the moppo, a compass not his power
A suggested trip of 2 hours took 5 times an hour
Deano his companion bush bashing up the front
Kicked over anything in his way with lots of grunt.

In the sequel to Cliffhanger Angela will be She's the fastest rock climber you'll ever see
She powered up crystal, slab and layback
This chick is good - hardly slack!

Mr. Scartaccini it saddens us greatly to leave you behind
But were splittin' this place to have a good time
If next year you get promoted to Year 12 then
The homeroom from hell can haunt you again.

By Stephen Symonds and Andrew "kid thunder" Harnett.

11M Continued

"No, I'll just stand out in the WEIN" replied ALISON.

GLEN discovered that the 11M Klu Klux Klan wasn't as INNESent as he previously thought.

"Come on you sLOWEs" yelled SIMONE "we're on a mission".

ANDRE retaliated with a Blast from the Past "Who's fork-n-spoon is this?" but didn't stop running. He quickly gained ground on the fleeing escapee. His footsteps were so intimidating that she ran back to Base 11M where she never dared to leave again.

10G is our name, room 31 is the place
Mrs May is our teacher, she keeps us in place
With 26 students and 1 Mrs May 10G is unique in it's own special way
Donavan is the locker boy, he can't keep out

'Out of there now' Mrs May has to shout

He sits with Byron, they're partners in crime

Close by Emma and Catherine giggle most of the time.

Megan C. and Jasmine are usually quiet

Where as Paul and Skip run a riot.

Karlie sits up front in a world of her own

Danielle's talking ability is always shown

Nicole and Nicole do nothing but goes while Mrs. May suffers from a patience loss

Sonja and Joeline F. sit innocently up the back

Emily turns around and chatter does not lack

Joseph and Daniel sit in the front row

Not doing much just going with the flow

Hayden Mills is excellent at art

As for Ross his growth needs a head start

Kevin and Michael sit together

Both wishing school would end forever

Fiona, Joe S., Naomi and Meghan are really rare

None of 'em have any brains to spare

The whole class forms a tribal

Listening as Craig recites the bible.

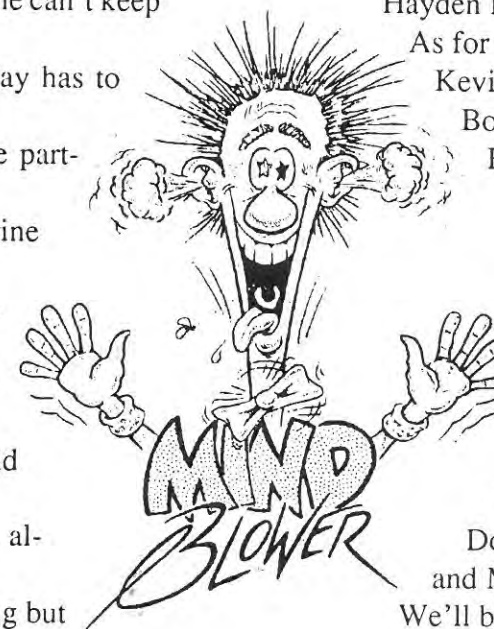

Now you know 10G, were a crazy mob

All we need now is Tom, Dick, Harry and Bob

Don't panic Mr Douglas, Mr Martino and Mrs May

We'll be back in '95 to make your day.

TEACHER: Mr. Paul Johnson

To start off this poem we thought we should say, this classroom is run by the dude, Mr. J

'In this case here' a phrase heard from
R.E.

An award for the loudest would go to Marie,
'Mozza' he barracks for the football team 'Cardies'.
Holly's constantly
talking about surfing and parties.

Simon has proven
he has no fears,

And Garb's, again, is picking on Trent's ears.

Phil's our comedian, he's funny and tall,

And the obvious comment for Brianne is she's small

As for Narelle, well she's never in silence

And Scott is always showing his violence

If it comes to the smartest well Iza's our main,

While Josh enjoys driving Mrs. Hamlett insane.

Delene would challenge anyone to a dare

Gemma and Nicole are a really great pair.

Nathan is loud and Aleesha is quiet
Brendon and Matt
keep the class in a riot.

Megan left for Perth so she hit the track

But Amanda arrived and Shara
came back.

Josie sits near Rita, whose great at netball

And Jenelle and Emma are the last of us all

But 10J is almost over with Year Eleven looming near,

We'll miss our fun in homeroom, and the crowd we had this year.

TEACHERS: Miss Jeannie Love and Miss Louise Ryan

The class was ready for a year of mucking around and mischief when suddenly the lights dimmed and an explosion went off at the top of the stairs. Smoke filled the room and the Year Ten homeroom met the Leo from hell, her golden mane bounced as she skipped down the stairs with confidence.

She knew the year would be daring and dangerous as the giggles arose. She glanced around the room "Silence!", she yelled, and wondered what she had gotten herself into.

As the year went on, Miss Ryan found things that she had never found before. Her class behaved wonderfully all of the time, although she did not know how they behaved when she left the room.

One day to her surprise, when her back was turned, her whole class was in a turmoil. The giggles erupted from the corner as Chantell and Kristy O. explained their fabulous weekend to the astonished Renae M. and Kristy W. Russell and Michael were occupied with keeping the screaming Charise and

Ben D. locked in the storeroom while Lisa protested to let them out and Ben H., Eamon and Jacob laughed and Erin sang to her hearts delight. Simon was playing a one-on-one basketball match with Matthew who made Shannon into a goal ring. Rebecca danced around the room whilst Emma and Laura sat on the stairs and talked endlessly about things that had happened recently. Owen was practising his surfing techniques and Aaron swapped basketball cards with Grahe 11me. Megan and Lauren laughed about nothing and Jasmine joined in. The whole class was making a huge racket and Miss Ryan had no idea that her class could be so mischevious.

She turned quickly and she was just as surprised as before because her class was seated nicely and as quietly as mice.

Miss Love walked in, looked around and said to Miss Ryan "You have the most wonderfully behaved class" and walked out. 10L is just a bunch of angels, NOT!!!!

To the tune of "click goes the shears"

Verse 1

Out at the lockers the jolly kids stand.
 The best darn talkers in all of this land.
 Out comes Martella as she begins to yell,
 To hurry all of us inside before the second bell.

Chorus

"Roar (10) , goes Martella,
 "Roar , Roar ! Roar !"
 A roar so deafening we really can't ignore.
 We get our books together with a bang and a crash,
 And hurry to in homeroom with a mad dash.

Verse 2

We start off the morning with a lovely prayer,
 For Kirsty to laugh now she wouldn't dare.
 Rory always manages to start the prayer all late
 And then comes the entrances of Mandy and Cate.

Chorus

Verse 3

Then every day 6, 10M has Voc Ed,
 But the problem is there's always Adam's head,

For every accasion Martella's new cliché's,
 Then to class Carly and Nicole slowly make their ways.

Chorus

Verse 4

Who knows what will happen next in our class R.E.
 With the amazing stunts on the roof by Paul Na-ni.
 For this wonderful subject we have Mrs. McBride,
 And often we've been known to take
 Our teacher for a ride.

Chorus

Verse 5

Ronald, Ryan, Grant, Kam, and Karen, Phil.
 Nyree, Gail, Kylie, Angie, Jennie, The Edge.
 Liona, Nhung, Anna, Brett, and Ailsa's sideburns,
 Hey kids aren't you lucky Martella for afternoon homeroom.

Just to inform you about our humble 10T class,
 When it comes to class participation we sure say
 'pass'!

Mr. Twynham left us with a sad farewell tear,
 And when Ms. Murray took over, our emotions showed fear
 So keep reading this poem and you may soon find
 A little bit about each one of us, you'll keep in mind

Burnsy and David always have their daily fight,
 But Monty believes that peace and hippies are right.
 Steven Kwasha's our Baa Baa black sheep,

Suzanna and Micheal are usually fairly quiet but poor Ms. Murray controls the whole riot!
 I think that's everyone, at least I hope so!
 We'll see ya around next year except those who'll go.

Co-Ordinator's Report

Year Ten students tend to be lively, enthusiastic and generous. The 1994 group proved to be no exception to this rule.

In Term One the homeroom representatives were chosen. They were Narelle Italiano, Iza Paszkudzka, Jenny Clarke, Ben Piggott, Angie Kendal, Kirsty Vanderloop, Aaron Turner, Russel Panham, Sonia O'Conner, Joe Addy, Trudy Carr and Tim Pardoe.

Sonia and Aaron were elected as Year Representatives of the SRC. These students did a great job and certainly proved their peers' good sense in electing them.

Mrs Forrest organised for the Youth Disciples missions group to conduct the Year Ten Retreat at the beginning of Term Two. The students responded positively and courteously and gained much from their experience. Their enthusiastic participation in the activities was a great tribute to the year group's zest for life and ability to get the most out of opportunities offered to them.

Traditionally the Year Tens have been very generous in fund raising activities. In 1994 they helped

Ms Ryan organise an Arthritis Foundation fund raising event. They initiated the school appeal for victims of the Rwanda War and excelled themselves by raising a very high sum at the School Fete. This year's Year Tens have every reason to be proud of their generosity.

This group saw themselves as individuals. They resisted society's pressures and insisted on being themselves. It was apt therefore that a Year Ten student, Catherine Green, made school, perhaps international, history when she registered her protest against the conventional segregation of boys and girls for the annual class photographs. Perhaps Catherine foreshadows future trends. I expect we hear more of this in future.

I wish all of the Year Tens success and happiness in the future. May the transition to Upper School be smooth and may they continue to make the most of their opportunities.

God bless

ABSENTEES: Leon Rozendai, Jackie Idziak, Trevor Todhunter, Therese Malolo, Jessica Scoble.

Teacher: Mr Craig McArthur

9A is a class of character. It is always full of life. I should know. It is full of laughter and good times. Mr Mac was a great teacher and when he left, we thought all was lost, until Mrs Vanderloop came, a new lease of life for 9A. ADAM O'BYRNE

The best fun was coming into 9A. I remember all the good things Mr Mac told us for later life. We never expected to have so much fun. The worst news was when Mr Mac was leaving. The funniest thing was John - Talents in our class included everyone.

Hannah and Nat sit together, and together forever they'll sit.

They talk and they talk forever, and together forever they'll sit. H.G. & N.C.

The best fun was when we had Mr Mac. I remember when we had a fete. We never expected Mr Mac would leave. The worst news was we weren't going down south. The funniest thing was when we mucked around.

9A is 9A not 9G, 12L but 9A.... we don't copy people, we are original

I never expected to be friends with the people I am with now.

Kind and trusting people. We never expected Mr Mac to leave.

The best fun was when Mr Ego played a joke on Mr Macs.

Tamra's photos (always got the camera on someone)

Mr Mac leaving and we all being sad.

We never expected Mr Mac to leave and it was sad but we all remember the good times.

I remember our mass when I did the rosary thing. AARON CHIRCOP

 FIRST ROW: Kylie Coleman, Bianca Cadd, Anita Michela, Jade Donetta, Vanessa Ierace, Karla Marah, Kelly Papalia.
 ABSENTEES: Nicole Van Heerwaarden, Matthew Potter.
 TEACHER: Mr G Chipchase

The one thing I'll never forget about our homeroom 9G, the best in the whole of BCC, is the everyday occurrence of Mr Moxham's famous line "Can we make a start, PLEASE!"

I'll never forget 9B's balcony, Romeo & Juliet and all the wonderful teaparties. It was the only safe place, you didn't have to dodge anything and you weren't attacked by the wild ones.

I have like being in 9G because I get along really well with everyone. The people in my homeroom are all really friendly and it's like one big family. It's good when we say the prayer in the morning because everyone can pray for something they want or need. Mr Moxham is a cool teacher.

I have got to know some certain people very well such as Rebecca Panetta. She's a disc vase. I have felt unsafe in 9G when the footballs go flying in home room.

We are the Year 9 class of Legends. I'll never forget Adrian's "hairdo", Miss Daly's RE turned into Mr Mox's human biology!!

9G is the brightest homeroom in the year 9 block.

Everytime I walk into 9G for homeroom all the boys are yelling, throwing, punching, kicking, running around the room until they notice Mr Moxham is in the room watching their physical play.

9G is the best class out. And from that I have no doubt. When Katie, Rebecca and Diane start to gossip it around. Michelle and Rima start the prayer, while Brett fiddles with his hair. Keith, Josh, Simon and Jay always like to have their say.

9G is a good homeroom

 ABSENTEES: April Carroll, Scott Rodgers, Therese Maher.
 TEACHER: Mr Michael Downes

Bedelia, Joanne and Therese are sitting quietly up the front, only to hear the faint ruffle of eucalyptus drops being sucked on. Alanna and Nicole are drooling over some guys in a Girlfriend magazine while Micheal Jeffree is talking to Tammy, who is trying to have a sneak peek. Kharn and Horner pinch it and run around the room with it until you can hear the door open. Mr Downes enters looking furious with all the squabbling. "SIT DOWN!" he roars, everyone takes their seats. Shannon comes in, walks into the locker room where Amanda and Tahlia are talking to Kate from Mr Moxham's class. Shannon warns them that Mr Downes is here and they quickly sit down.

Kylie makes her 'late' grand entrance while Damon is still playing 'chicken' on the road. April is wandering around being a lost soul annoying everyone. Liam is trying to convince Scott that he has 'foot in mouth' disease giving him a demonstration with a dirty shoe. Mr Downes gives them a queer look while he is filling out the absentee form ready to give to Shannon. Micheal Ratcliffe and Zane are talking about nothing and are more content punching each other. Moana is off at a SRC where Tahlia should be and realises after five minutes. Mark turns to Paul to tell him what happened on 'Whinny the Pooh' when he watched it on the bus. Paul, of course, ignores him and turns around to ask Anthony La a question on factorising. Anthony Harris gets up to talk to Paul then gets up to annoy Mr Downes who is still trying to figure out who is away. Brendan O'Connor and Brendan Gear are fighting over what ear Brendan O'Connor should get pierced.

Finally we quieten down and listen to the daily bulletin. THANKS MR DOWNES !!!

THIRD ROW: Adrian McSweeney, Simon Kolbelke, Ben Muscat, Jamie Jobson, Kristian Vredenburg, Marcus Pelusey.

FIRST ROW: Charmaine Lindberg, Stacey Harding, Marina Depiazzi, Dianne Vidos, Rima Ghandour, Michelle Moriarty, Rebecca Panetta, Rebecca Thorpe, Justine Pitt.

TEACHER: Mr Gregg Moxham

In our class 9C, we have Angela who is reknown for her athletics ability. Then theres Maria. Yes Maria....what a mouth. Does she ever shut up? Anita sits quietly with her primary school diary, all her secrets, gossip, and love lives of her primary school mates. Next to her is Kylie gossiping with Maria (the mouth). Now theres Jade and Donetta. Its funny you know, Jade's real name is Jade Donetta. These two always turn around to the love of their lives, Daniel (sorry girls). Daniel is the basketballer of the class who always seems to be chewing gum and always gets caught by Miss Condidorio. Karla and Nicole sit up the front talking and giggling getting into trouble while Matthew K never speaks at all. Michael and Ian can't stop drawing their comical characters in their own little world. Gary sits in the back corner chewing his gum talking to Daniel and John spends hours doing his hair.

Matthew Potter is sitting in the corner looking spick and span as though he is ready to go into a conference, while Paul Cross is sitting there looking out the window. Bianca is busy writing notes to someone or drawing on her file, while next to her, Kelly watches in disgust. Andrew and Anthony in front of them are sitting there wacking the hell out of the mobiles above them with their rulers. And up the very front, Matthew Smith is usually throwing a rubber or something at Vanessa as though its a hand grenade.

Casey sits down the back with Doe Boy by his side and the two of them are still deciding how to get rid of the girls on their diaries.

Sonia and Naomi are always gossiping behind them until Jiah finally butts in saying "What's this?" As if he doesn't already know!

Vanessa sits up the front with Carla, and the two of them are constantly laughing and giggling.

Jason is the most enthusiastic member of the class as he proves that is is possible to fall asleep with one's eyes open.

By Angela, Maria, Anita, Daniel, Kylie, Jade and Donnetta.

FOURTH ROW: Rory Taylor, Nathan Eaton, Anthony Brookes, Douglas May.

THIRD ROW: Sarah Dean, Kristie Thompson, Elizabeth Talbot, Marina Garic, Rebecca Punch, Katherine Mahony.

SECOND ROW: Nick Quin, Jonathon Rooney, Richard Evans, Ashley Gasmier, Luke Lumley, Ben Mountford, Frank Italiano, Matthew Novak.

FIRST ROW: Gemma Dechiera, Lauren Princi, Jaime Lewis, Kym Scott, Jodie Kirkpatrick, Kristie-lee Phelps, Merrin Fabre, Rebecca Deluce, Nicola Piacentini.

ABSENTEES: Risi Oregioni, Dion Barber.

TEACHER: Mrs Lelsa Maslin.

Some very different people came wandering into 9M in 94. Now I'll tell you a bit about them all. loves his hair , Matthew and Jonathon kick the footy.

The bell has gone, it's 8.35 but no one has appeared.

Nathan and Rorey wait at the door eager for the day to begin.

Sarah and Katherine have been at Wollaston and are loaded up with lollies. They stroll through the door trying to look on time and conceal the strange lumps in their mouths and pockets.

Our new Religion teacher is Mr Doyle, whose fans, Jodie, Marina and Kristie-Lee, can only be described as loyal. But the most devoted fan of all is Ashley !

For when Mr Doyle lopped off his locks, Gasi went out, gave everyone a shock and shaved his block.

Jaime has dyed her hair black, Frank is about to sit on a tack (Ben placed it on his chair). Douglas May Brooker hangs off any door frame in sight. Merrin and Gemma are much liked. Nicola is quiet and considerate but Rebecca Punch is laughing and loud.

Luke is pulling Laurens hair. Rishi will put down his hair and Kristie will be quiet without a care (NOT !!).

The horsey freaks Libby and Kym.

Into nicks mouth a spitball sneaks.

Rebecca Deluce is dancing away, while Richards patience begins to fray as Dion tosses his pencils away into the bin, not realising the seriousness of his sin. An anonymous spitball hits the clock and on the door Mrs Maslin knocks. She's back from the funny farm, she couldn't live without 9M's charm. She's back once more and a lot happier than before.

Co-ordinators Report

As I look back over the year, a question exists that I find hard to answer "where has 1994 gone?". The first day of school arrived with students ready to start unit curriculum and now they are making their study choices for 1995.

Semester One saw students face up to the challenges of ten to twelve different teachers, constant room changes, new friends, harder subjects, exam week, as well as the normal pressures of growing up.

With the students came three new homeroom teachers to Year Nine: Mr Chipchase, Mr Moxham, Mr McArthur and along with Mrs Maslin, we did our best to guide the students through this small but significant part of their lives.

9G continued.

I'll never forget when Keith hit Simon on the face with the footy. He turned around and ran into the wall! The people in our homeroom are friendly and they'll make you crack up when you're down or Keith will hit you in the head with the footy. I'll never forget when Kobelski edged Jay.

I'll never forget when Adrian came to school with a funny hair do. And when Kebowski got hit in the nose with a football then straight away walked into the wall.

I'll never forget this HOMEROOM because of the people in it.

When Jay Williams was egged by a stranger. Everyone laughed and jeered.

I'll never forget the time when Mr Moxham asked us all to catch him, as he came down we moved away.

I'll never forget the jokes we told each other in Homeroom. And how Kobelke got sconded with the footy that time and walked into the wall.

We unfortunately lost the services of Mr McArthur at the close of Term Three but were grateful to have Miss Vanderloop join us.

I would like to thank all homeroom teachers and support staff for the care and concern they have shown the students and the support given to me over the year.

Thanks also go to Father Pat Rooney for the time he made available to the students and the staff as well as Miss Pat McDonagh whose help and guidance is invaluable.

To the students of Year Nine, your futures will only be as good as what you make of today. All the best for 1995 in Year Ten.

I would like to wish everyone a merry Christmas and a safe happy holiday.

Michael Downes.

Our class on the whole gets along quite well.

We don't fight between ourselves, and co-operate well with each other.

We've all come from different backgrounds so we have a variety of personalities.

Most of us have discovered new friends and a few of us have made special relationships!! We all blend in well with the rest of the school and act as though we have been here all our lives most of us enjoy school but we all hang out for the 3:00pm siren!! We all get along well with our teachers. Over all most of us enjoy high school and find it a breeze.

AN AVERAGE DAY FOR 8C

During Maths Jamie A mucks about,
 Jamie Warburton always has his shirt hanging out.
 Carinne and Michelle go to Mr Purcell,
 While in every subject Emma does excel.
 Craig cracks jokes and tries to be funny,
 While Vicky and Holly are looking for money.

In P.E. We were doing athletics
 And everyone thought it was so pathetic.
 "How do you throw a javelin or hammer?
 Shut-up Greg what is the matter?
 Everyone hold the javelin up high.
 Craig don't be stupid you'll poke out an eye."

Mrs Morris is our Science teacher,
 Her shortness is her BIGGEST feature.
 Natalie and Podgorny are forever fighting.
 As Peter with his methane causes a bit of thunder and lightning.
 Scott Fahey ditches a cork in the air,

So everyone has to stay in their chair.

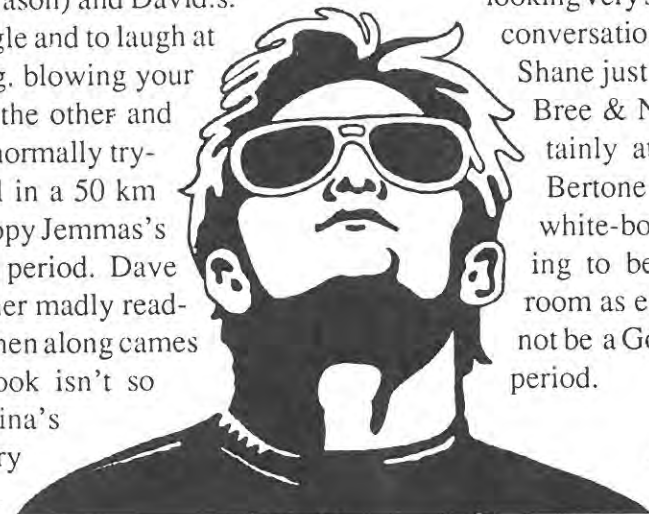

Even in P.D. Rob is totally wacko,
 Damian has now become Daniel's foe
 Kelly and Rachel sit there and talk,
 At Elle's legs does Patrick gawk.
 Always found together are Ellen and Nicole,
 While Mrs Forrest tells us to look deep in our soul.

Our homeroom teacher is Mrs Johnson (to be),
 In I.S. Tanya always giggles with glee.
 Kimyin Sue is a mini version of Kam,
 Stephanie and Aaron are as meek as a lamb.
 Sonya is dreaming of shopping in a mall,
 As Clinton and Shane are having a great ball.
 David and Ben, well what can we say?
 Whether it is Science, English or Arithmetic,
 To much homework will make us sick,
 But when it's time to pass the test,
 8C really are the best.

Brrringgg! Yes luckily only one more period to go in one of those totally utterly- let's go back to sleep double maths periods. But we're allowed to get up and have a stretch (There is a God). As usual Emily runs out the door to catch up on the latest goss with any unexpected passer-by David.F. run's out to the locker room to pick up the book he'd forgotten hoping a teacher doesn't catch him while catherine, Sian and Bronwyn (Bishop!) head out to the loos for a, you know. Paul, Fish (Jason) and David.s. get up for their hourly giggle and to laugh at anything anyone does. (eg. blowing your nose from one nostril to the other and back again) Luke, who's normally trying to crack onto any girl in a 50 km radius is madly trying to copy Jemmas's home-work for the next period. Dave Kirky's sitting in the corner madly reading a HUGE thick book when along comes Liz and suddenly the book isn't so interesting any more. Davina's in the room giving very needed fighting tips to ,

Shaun and to Stephens while Kate, Cathy & Jennie are re-doing their hair (again) in the window. Beth looks very lost, but Emily comes to the rescue to tell her which guys are available this hour. Ashly and Paul are right up the back, trying to hide under their desk from suspicious-looking Mr Scarticcini, Cameron's catching up on some very needed (NOT) study, when suddenly he gets hit on the neck by a slobbery spitball, he turns to find Ryan Fitz looking very suspicious in a deep (FAKE) conversation with Ryan .D. Halinka & Shane just cracked up again! To find Bree & Nicole looking very uncertainly at them. Arrrrgggg! Patrick Bertone as just looked up to find a white-board full of notes just waiting to be copied. Silence fills the room as everyone realises there may not be a God after-all. Brrringgg! 2nd period.

TEACHER: Mr Peter Selby

Paul and Anthony are best-friends and they have arguments across the room calling each other unmentionable-names-for-a-school magazine. While talking to Paul, Anthony cuts up little bits of rubber to throw at Jay, who's trying to fall asleep. Some of the rubbers accidentally-on-purpose hit Nathan who is trying to work. To get his attention Anthony pulls Nathan's chair back so he can't reach his desk. They bump into Zane and April's desk behind. April has snuck over to talk to Jackie and is trying not to be too obvious in showing that she's passing Jackie a note inside the pencil case. She glances at Adrian who is busy attempting to win "Most Disgusting" award for the second time by licking his desk and trying to convince Sonia that he honestly HAS stuck her pen up his nose, and conducting an experiment to see if it is possible to shove Sonia's ruler up his left nostril. Sonia screams at him and turns to Naomi to hold a deep conversation about the latest gossip, and try to get Michelle and Rima's attention to tell them about those cute guys they saw last-night. Abbey is having a laughing fit because of Luke, who is funny without even doing anything. Of course Frank has to get attention so he falls off his chair and Selby repeats his famous sentence, "There's four legs on a chair! (Duh!)". Then Frank annoys Rachel who ignores him and turns around to talk to Gemma. Notes go back and forth between Therese, Joanne and Kristie-Lee but are quickly stolen by the two Matthews. Rory, Daniel and Andrew mostly like a quiet life, which is kind of hard to get with Shayne, Frank and Damon having a competition to see who is the first to hit the clock with a slobber-saturated spitball.

Sorry if we took ten years off your already very old life Mr Selby. (NOT!!! We were hoping for an early retirement. Maybe you'll be out of here before we are.)

Don't forget....in '94

WE'LL BE BACK !

Co-ordinator's report

From a Year 8 perspective, 1994 has gone extremely well. Our students arrived at high school with a enormous amount of energy and a desire to make the most of the challenges that lay ahead

Academically, our programme was re-organized in order to provide the students with a more challenging set of courses. While the work was at first somewhat difficult, the hard work is now beginning to pay off as our students are showing competence and a desire to do well.

For the first time this year, our bright Year 8 students participated in Australia wide competitions for English and social studies. The results achieved reflected that these students do possess talent in these subject areas. Well done to all participating students.

Early in the year, Bishop Quinn visited each Year 8 class. This event was extremely successful for students and staff, this visit was most affirming as the head of our Church in Bunbury was spending time with us.

Each Year 8 class also celebrated a class mass together. Thank you Father Pat for presiding for us.

In term three, the Year 8 students elected their student council. The successful representatives were Adrienne Hill / Joshua Reid (8S), Jennie Courtrey / Cameron Lindberg (8J), Delfs / Sam Eglington (8P), Boothey / Clinton Macri (8C) Doolan / Paul Hayward (8B).

These students have been given the opportunity to learn leadership skills that hopefully will be developed in the future.

Also in term three, the students council together with the Year 8 teachers organized a very successful afternoon with the Year 8 students from Mackillop

Catholic College. Hopefully this event will become an annual one and the beginning of a close relationship with our neighbouring Catholic school.

Another initiative of the student council was to choose a charity to support for the year.

After much deliberation, the decision was made to raise $650.00 to buy bricks needed to build an addition block for St Josephs Bombay. The Year 8 students held cake stalls, socials etc and successfully reached their goal. Well done on your commitment to this worthwhile cause Year 8.

Once again many parents' nights were held over the year. These events continue to provide an important opportunity for parents and staff to meet and discuss student progress. May I whole heartedly thank the Year 8 parents for all their help and support over the year. A Catholic school can only be successful in its mission if its parents are supportive and excellent role models for their children. The parents this year have been exceptional in their part of the education process.

The Year 8 students have been well supported this year by a dedicated group of homeroom teacher. These teachers live the daily trials tribulations and successes that come from being apart of Year 8. To Ms Battista, Miss Condidorio, Mr Neilson and Mr Selby, thank you for another hard working year.

In particular I would like to thank Mr Neilson who joined the year 8 team at the end of term two. He quietly took Class 8P under his wing and made sure that a change of teacher mid year would not be a set back to their education. On behalf of the Year 8 students and teachers I would also like to wish Miss Condidorio every happiness for her wedding during the holidays.

Mr Mark Browning
Year 8 Co-ordinator

SPORTING EVENTS

A.C.C. Athletics

In the A.C.C B division athletics carnival for 1994 our school competed very well. In total, 35 placings either first, second or third.

The junior boys came first, overall boys came fourth and the girls came sixth in junior, senior and overall.

Individuals who competed exceptionally well were;

Angela Summerfield in 6 events picked up five first's and one second placing,

Scott Cumming who won five events,

Daniel McLaren won three events,

Danie Clark either won or came second in three events,

Emma Giumelli who won two events,

however the most outstanding accomplishment for the carnival was Ben Piggott's record high jump of 1.95 meters for the under 15's.

Since the A.C.C Ben, Angela and Daniel have competed in the WA all schools titles and await their fortunes as to whether they have been selected in the

ACC

A year 8 Perspective

On a Monday in term three, about one hundred students and myself represented the school in track and field events. We left the school around 6 am bound for Perry Lakes stadium in Perth.

I was as nervous as anything for this was my first A.C.C and I didn't know what to expect. I didn't go very well and the officials seemed a little biased. The only section we took out was the junior boys. The best part of the day was eating at one of the fast food outlets at Mandurah Forum, even though our bus arrived late.

Marisa 8B.

WA all schools representative team to go to Brisbane in december.

All three competitors have been selected in the WA combined A.C.C honourary athletics team for 1994.

Congratulations to all the athletes, we are very lucky to have the calibre of athletes at school to inspire us and in future years.

Hopefully in 1995 we would be able to continue down the similar road.

House Athletics Carnival

On the 14th of September our annual House Athletics Carnival was held. It turned out to be a very successful day with many people competing and enjoying themselves. SOUTH WEST SENIOR HIGH SCHOOLS BASKETBALL LEAGUE

Bunbury Catholic College entered two teams in the South West League in 1994.

The south west league is a competition which is run for ten weeks in term two, and involves eight country high schools throughout the south west. Unfortunately the boys team did not achieve their hopes of playing in the finals, despite the great and dedicated coaching of ex-B.C.C student, Troy Brown.

The girls, however, managed to complete a great season with a 32 point grand-final victory over Bunbury Senior High school. Both teams trained hard and all competitors put in a lot of effort over the ten weeks.

Lets hope that next year both teams can achieve the honour of being the South West High school Basketball Champions !

Annual Hash House Harriers Yallingup To Busselton Relay

Once again the one who loves pain and always goes back for more, went back for more.... and dragged 7 of his students with him. Another cold Sunday morning we all staggered to Mr Eglington's house piled in his 4WD and took off for Yallingup. We were not very experienced at this race and so did not have the sophisticated equipment needed for the race (a sideboard on the truck). The first part is known as King of Mountain, this is where one member of each team races up a hill in Yallingup, the person who wins is named King. Mr Eg came a very respectable second (so I suppose you could call him Queen) to a competitor from Perth. We began running between 600 and 800 metre legs but realised that this was too long to keep up the pace we were producing so we cut back to 150 to 350 metre legs. With a lot of moaning, groaning, sweaty bodies piled over each other in the back of the 4WD and some pure rally driving from Owen we came in 6th out of a field of 8 and survived the after race drinks (we were only allowed lemon squash).

Team members included: Mr Eglington, Andrew Harnett, Scott Cumming, Owen Groves, Ben O'Kane, Tobin O'Kane, Danni Clarke and Eric Pretorius.

Relay Team

Capel To Collie Relay Classic

On the cold Sunday morning of the 14th of August, 13 crazy students from B.C.C., lead by the one who loves pain and always goes back for more (Mr Eglington) set out in a cold little bus to a cold little hole by the name of Capel. For those who don't know much about this race I will fill you in. Basically, it is when a bunch of people run in a relay sort of fashion from Capel, through the ugliest town in the galaxy (Donnybrook) and onto the only town you have to go up a hill to get in a hole (Collie). There were three school teams in the relay, Busselton High, Grammer, and US!!!! Only once during the whole race were we not in the number one position but as soon as that happened the one who does not run out of puff (Little Crossy) ran a blitzer over 11.7 km. 15 positions needed to be filled with only 13 of us so thanks go to three long distance hungry maniacs (Andrew .H., Owen .G. and Angela .S.) We finished the race in fabulous style claiming 6th place overall and 1st school across the line!

Thanks go to Mr Eglington for organising our team and Ms Battista for driving the team Torago with the mobile phone that isn't a mobile phone.

Team members included: Andrew Harnett, Scott Cumming, Owen Groves, Paul Cross, Oliver McBride, Tobin O'Kane, Emma Potter, Danni Clarke, Angela Summerfield, Piotr Baizert, Ben Moran, Oliver McBride and Anthony Brookes.

Football

This year the college competed in two major competitions, both aimed at the lower school boys.

YEAR 8 & 9 QUIT SHIELD.

The year 8 and 9 students began the season with a day long carnival held at Hay Park. The carnival included all of the schools from the South West region playing in a round robin tournament. Only the top school from each division would advance to the next round against the metropolitan schools.

In an impressive first match the BCC team combined to out class the team from Bunbury High. With strong tackling and persistent pressure the team methodically overcome their rivals and then ran on to win by a comfortable 12 goals. This result set us up for a vital match with Australind. With only four teams in our particular division even one loss meant virtually no chance of any further advancement in the state wide competition.

The game against Australind was a fiercely fought match from the outset. The boys applied themselves excellently in a game where not much went their way. In the end, however, the Australind team were just too strong and held on to win by 9 points. This left us with the unenviable scenario of of playing the very strong team of Newton Moore (eventual runners up in the entire contest) and needed a solid win if we were to advance.

From the outset Newton Moore's size and strength advantage took us by surprise and they eventually ran out winners by some easily forgotten score. Despite the end result it was pleasing to see the way the boys gave it everything they had and their impressive sportsmanship and endeavours. The carnival gave a strong indication of better things to come in our other competition.

THE SOUTH WEST INDEPENDENT SCHOOL'S SHIELD.

This was a competition that ran for the duration of term three. It was aimed at the independent schools in the area. These included. Bunbury Cathedral grammar, Mandurah Catholic College, Frederick Irwin (Mandurah) and ourselves. The competition allowed both year 8 & 9 to play as well as a smaller number of year tens.

After the preliminary matches that were played both in Mandurah and at home, the final game was to be between Bunbury Grammar and ourselves. After easily accounting for a determined Mandurah Catholic College in the semi-final the boys confidence was high. Over the term they had developed into a team that was prepared to run hard, share the ball with each other and more importantly do the team things rather than looking for individual honours. It was this quality that was the real strength of the TEAM. What made this all the more impressive was the age differences between the boys.

The final, as expected was an excellent game. After a furious start with the aid of the breeze the BCC team led easily. However, despite the coaches warning that football is a four quarter game, and not to relax the boy's squandered their lead and half time saw the difference only 6 points in our favour. After a few kind, if somewhat loud, words from their coach, the boys regrouped.

The third quarter produced some of the best junior football I have seen.

Both teams played the game at an incredible pace, there were examples of both brilliant team play and excellent individual efforts. To Grammar's credit they fought against the tide as BCC attacked relentlessly. The score at the end of the quarter saw us with a four goal lead.

The final quarter was played as though following a script. The Grammar team played excellently closing the gap rapidly. However, with a final surge and some tireless work in defence the BCC team wouldn't concede and hung on to a slender 10 point lead for the last few minutes. It was both a deserved and rewarding win.

Rather than mention individuals who played well, I would rather follow the example the boys set and simply mention the team as a whole. Their attitude towards the games was excellent as was their sportsmanship and development. I hope that the future will bring the boys more success both as a team and as individuals. I also hope that this competition can be developed as it was well run and has the potential to become a great competition for even more schools in the South West.

CRAIG DOYLE COACH

Marist Cricket.

The 1995 annual Marist ricket carnival in Sydney is one which will be full of promise. This year the team is shaping up to be a much more evenly balanced one. We will again be guided by Bernie Andrews our coach, and Mrs Nicholas our team manager. All of the boys have enthusiastically taken part in our fundraising events, and on behalf of all the boys we will endeavour to do our best when representing B.C.C in sydney.

Swimming

In 1994 the school swimming team competed in the A division of the Associated and Catholic Colleges Swimming Carnival.

Overall the school placed a creditable 6th of the eight schools with our Jnr boys finishing 2nd behind St Bridgid's Mazenod and our senior boys also came 2nd behind Newman.

This was the first year that a non-metropolitan school competed in the A division, several of our swimmers broke records.

In particular Toni Ciffolilli, later in the year went onto the AIS In Canberra and competed exceptionally well throughout the year.

Danny Novak won his age division in the U/13 and was awarded the championship with an outstanding 45 points.

Three of our swimmers were nominated in the honorary combined ACC swimming team, they were Danny Novak for freestyle backstroke, butterfly and relay, Toni Ciffolilli for freestyle breaststroke, backstroke and relay and Nita Godley for 50m breaststroke.

Congratulations to the school swimming team and we all hope that 1995 will again be a successful year.

Water Polo

For those not familiar with the sport of water polo, it is a game that requires high levels of fitness, dedication, enthusiasm and obviously an ability to swim. Fortunately for the College there were many students who possessed these qualities and joined the BCC teams. In fact BCC was the only school to enter two teams in the Bunbury Schools Competition held on Saturday mornings. There was an A team made up of more experienced players and a B team made up of beginners who just learned the basics of the game. The competition began in Term 2 and continued until the later stages of Term 3. Throughout this time training was held each Wednesday night.

The two most impressive aspects that students displayed was their ability to always try and learn, even under some fairly trying training conditions, (25 students in 2 lanes), and the spirit that they showed in both games and training was a commendable asset. They were always positive and seemed to enjoy what they were doing. This contributed to the way the two teams quickly assimilated into cohesive working units. The spirit flowed over into games with both teams reluctant to lose and always striving to win.

As the season progressed so too did the level of improvement in all players. Both teams were competitive with the A team always near the top and the B team further back in fourth.

After the last round of fixtures the finals were decided. The A team was in the Grand Final against Newton Moore and our B team was playing for third against Bunbury Senior High School. Directly after the final round, 14 of our students headed to Perth for what we hope will become an annual training camp.

On the camp students were coached for two days by some of the best senior and junior players that the state and country has to offer. The highlight of the weekend would have had to have been a training session with two time olympic player and former Australian Captain David Neesham. Though a demanding camp the weary players returned to Bunbury with a noticeably increased level of skill.

The following weekend saw some excellent finals. Our B team showed how much they had improved by conceding a four goal head start to BSHS then coming back to finally win by one goal. The B team had not beaten BSHS all season and chose an opportune time to win. Although a great team performance I feel a mention of a fine individual effort sums up the game well. Michelle Nutt had not scored a goal all year, yet in the final she threw the goal that gave the BCC team the lead for the first time. The excitement this generated gave the B team the edge and they hung on for a magnificent win.

The Grand Final was an equally impressive game as the BCC A team blended to form a team which played consistently creative offence and tight stifling defense. The more confident and experienced players from the Newton Moore team were consistently thwarted in their attempts to score, and as their annoyance grew so to did their foul count. Team work and desire to win were the only words to sum up their efforts in a tight two goal win. It was BCC's first win in the competition.

In all, the season was a rewarding one as students tasted both personal and team success. A special thanks must go to Mrs Ilacqua for her help with the camp and to Mr Ilacqua for his help in coaching and organising the entire season. I wish the students all the best with their continuing development in a sport that is rapidly becoming both more popular and competitive.

C DOYLE, COACH

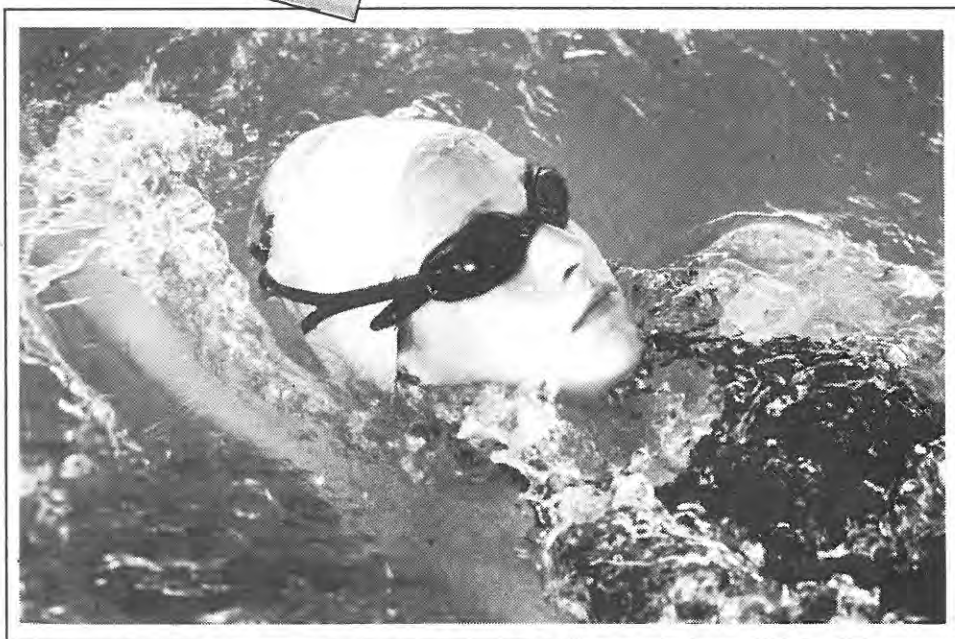

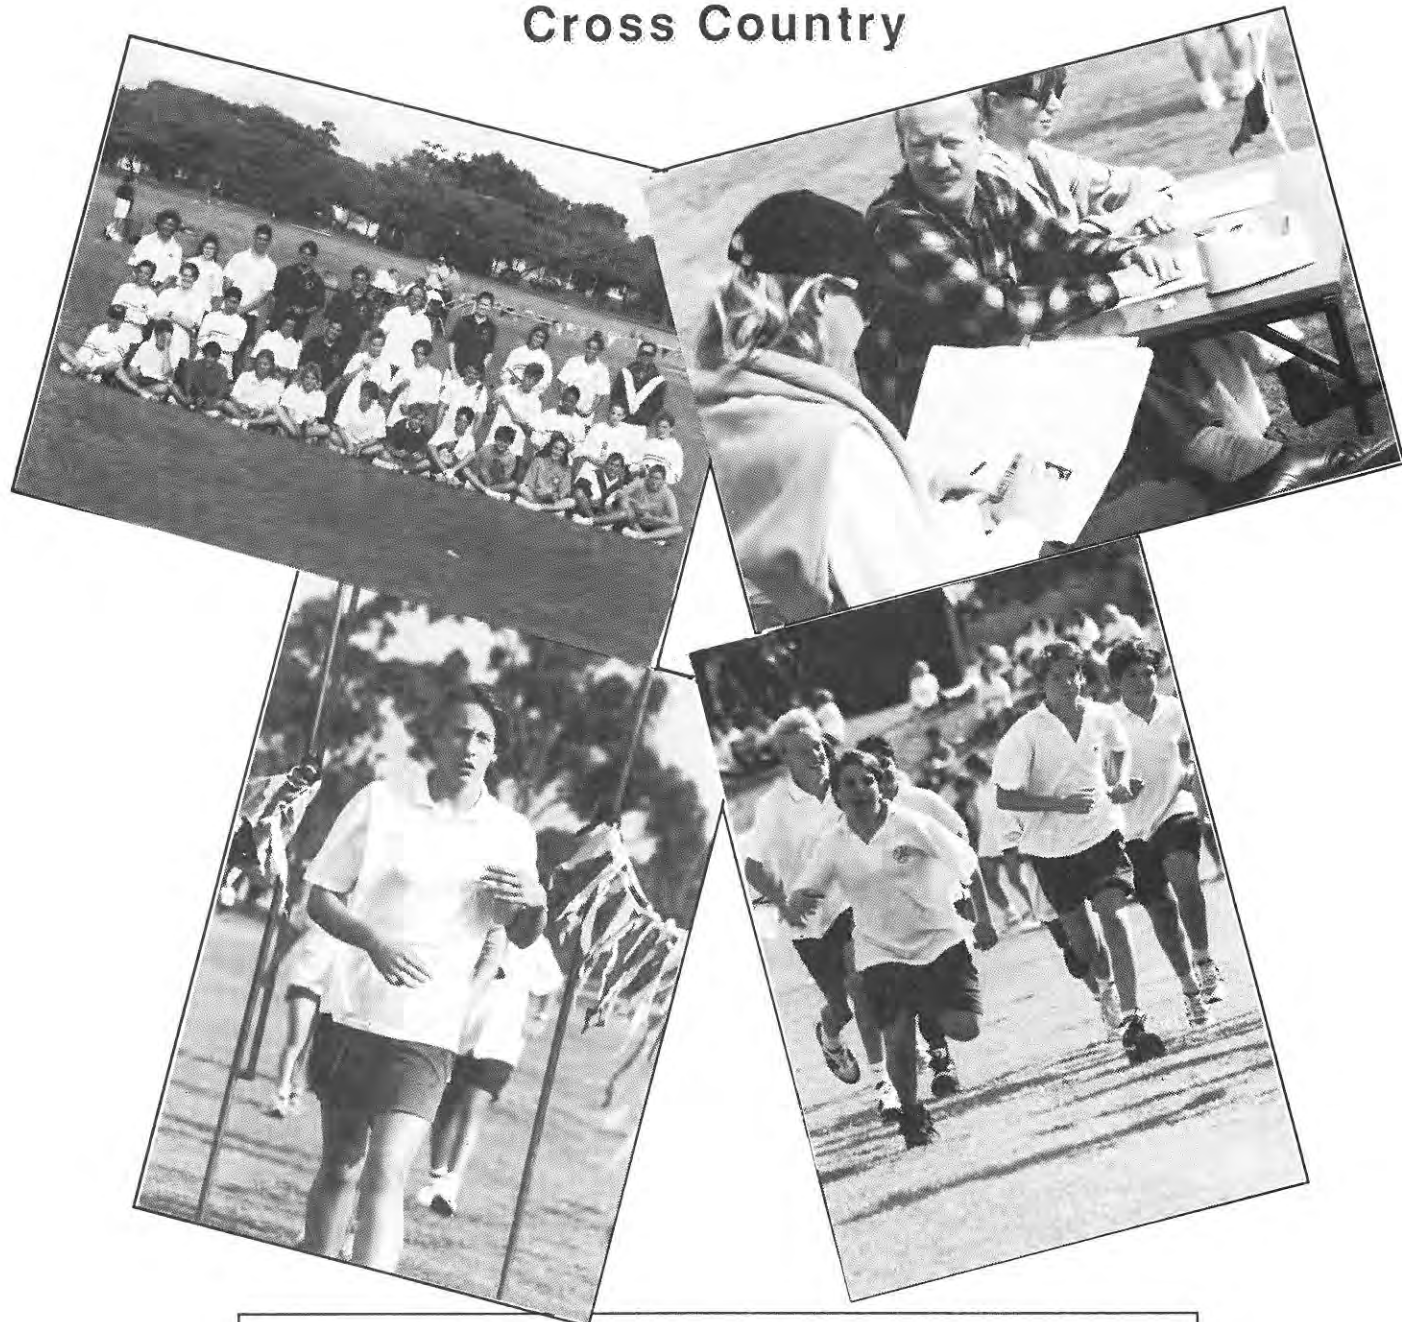

Volleyball

What can I say? Firstly the girls were thrown straight into the A grade section and we came second last. Our team, The Paranoid schizophrenics, consisted of Denica "No Comment" Walton, Christine "Step on People" Streeter, Rachelina "Direction" Santella, Julia "Serving Queen" Nutley, Merrin "Next Court" Fabre and Kym "Ball" Johnson. In the second season we lost one player and came third after being defeated in the preliminary finals.

The guys: Callen Tanner, Scott Cummings, Romar Chatt, Robert Maszkowski, Miles Mulligan, Jacob Edmoson and Martin Dixon won the Winter Grand Final and Scott Cummings won Most Valuable Player.

I am sure we all had a good time and thanks to Mr Stewart for his patience. Best of luck to the future volleyball heroes!
